Gen. Marshall Protested Strikes, Green Says

AFL Leader Calls On Roosevelt to 'Reprimand Whoever Was Responsible'

By Ben W. Gilbert

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday named Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, as the "high personage" who stated that the rail and steel labor disputes may have lengthened the war, and demanded that President Roosevelt "investigate the mysterious Marshall incident and reprimand whoever was responsible for it."

A hint as to the President's attitude was provided earlier by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early who told reporters that the President and the high official seemed "to be thinking along the same lines."

"Message of Sanity"

Terming his statement, "a message of sanity to the American people," and calling the charges which he attributed to Marshall, "irrational, uninformed, and inflammatory," Green said:

"We challenge General Marshall, or anyone else, to prove that the report of America's soldiers of production provides an effective propaganda weapon for the enemy. On the contrary, the fact is that American workers have silenced Hitler's propaganda guns and have shortened the war by turning out tremendous quantities of planes, ships, guns and ammunition in record time."

"Merely a Device"

The high official was quoted Friday as saying that the threatened railroad strike and the walkout of 150,000 steel workers had provided the Nazis with a propaganda weapon which could be used to head off possible revolts in the satellite nations of Europe and within Germany. He requested that his name be withheld.

Green asserted that the railroad strike threat was "merely a device, wholly in accordance with law" to speed up Government handling of the dispute, and that "although a strike date had been set, there never was the faintest possibility of an actual walkout on the Nation's railroads."

"I hereby charge," Green said, "that the responsibility for the prolongation of these disputes rests entirely upon bungling, fumbling and incompetent handling by Government officials and agencies."

Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steel Workers, in Pittsburgh, released copies of a telegram sent to War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson and to General Marshall in which he pointed out that "more than 90 million tons of steel were poured at the enemy last year," and added:

"There must be little 'psychological comfort' for the enemy in this amazing record. When our bombers fly over Europe, they drop steel encased bombs and not psychology. . . . In making reference to psychology, I am referring particularly to the term used by the unnamed 'high Washington official'

General Marshall Vs. William Green

IN another column on this page William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, calls upon President Roosevelt to reprimand Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

Mr. Green accepts reports that General Marshall is the "high source" who last week stated in an off the record press conference that the "taking over of the railroads by the Army and the walkout in the steel mills may have prolonged the war against Germany by six months, causing hundreds of thousands of needless casualties."

Then Mr. Green attempts to prove that the apprehensions of the "high source" are completely unfounded by making a series of amazing statements.

MARSHALL

"It is the height of stupidity to suggest that Nazi Germany and its satellite nations will be encouraged to continue the war by the existence of a few wage disputes in America," says the great strategist, William Green, who maneuvered the disastrous retreat for George Browne and Willie Bioff. "Our enemies know the war will be decided only by the force of arms."

LET General Marshall and the Allied high command remember that! William Green and his compatriot, Phillip Murray, president of the CIO, have decided there is no such thing as psychological warfare. The history books back to the dawn of civilization say differently but in 1944 one is expected to listen to William Green.

Then comes a statement which for sheer naivete is unparalleled.

"I hereby assert unequivocally that, although a strike date had been set, there never was the faintest possibility of an actual walkout on the Nation's railroads," says Mr. Green. "The railroad unions, most of which are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, are responsible organizations led by responsible and patriotic officials. Their record is among the finest in the Nation. They gave their solemn assurance to the President and to Congress that, come what might, there would be no railroad strike. Setting of a strike date was merely a device, wholly in accordance with law, to expedite determination of a dispute which had dragged 15 months and which had seriously upset the morale of the Nation's railroad workers."

GREEN

IN other words, Mr. Green and the Railroad Brotherhoods were simply holding a gun at the head of the President and Congress in time of war. The President was not certain the gun was not loaded, from a strike or a wage standpoint. He turned the railroads over to the Army. William Green would have cut off his right hand before he would have made the above statement before the President acted.

Accepting Mr. Green's assumption that the "high source" is General Marshall, let us put ourselves in that military leader's shoes for a moment. He had just returned from the Cairo and Teheran conferences and a trip to every fighting front in the Pacific. He knew the details of every strategic plan. He had visited the cemeteries of American dead, the hospitals filled with American wounded.

He returned to take over the burdens of the most hazardous military operation in all history; the coming invasion of Europe.

And what did he find?

HE found that in addition to his countless other burdens, the Army he, more than anyone else, had built, also had to battle Mr. William Green and run the railroads in this country. Hundreds of his best officers would have to be used to deal with Mr. Green et al. instead of Hitler and Tojo.

And so—and one can understand it—even he is said to have expressed his indignation and brought the strike situation before the public in its true light.

It is obvious that he should not have been required to take this step. He is a soldier and answers to a Commander-in-Chief. That is the only reason his name could not be used. Gen. George C. Marshall never hid behind any man's back. He needs no defense, and most certainly not from the William Greens, the Phillip Murrays, or any of the isolationist politicians who are adding their voices to the clamor.

He pointed out the disastrous consequences of strikes, and threats to strike, against the Government's effort to avoid inflation and he did America as great a service as he ever did in military council.

The Post believes that the President, the Congress and the country will back Gen. George C. Marshall.

This backing may come in the form of a National Service Act or some legislative substitute that will serve that purpose.

It cannot come too soon.

Crux of War Lies in Air, Arnold Says

Turning Point Reached, German Plane Replacements Falter, He Declares

By James F. King

The present struggle for air supremacy over western Europe represents a major turning point in the war and if the present rate of German losses continues only a small percentage of total replacements can be supplied by the Nazi war machine, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, said yesterday in a report on Air Forces operations to the Secretary of War.

"What American and Royal Air Force bombers can do to the whole German war machine, once the German fighter force is rendered impotent, needs no comment," he said. "The issue hangs now on which side first falters, weakens and loses its punishing power. We will not falter."

Arnold said that despite the fact supplies must be carried by air over mountains 17,000 feet high between India and China, Japan would be attacked heavily from Chinese bases. "Neither Japanese shipping nor Japanese industry will survive the bombing in store for them."

Cites Logistics Problem

However, he warned that:

"Those persons who think that after the costly and time-consuming defeat of Germany we can by simple order fly our planes to China, bomb Tokyo and bring Japan to her knees, do not yet understand the need for vast supply lines, well equipped bases and planes built to fight under entirely different conditions from those that prevail over Europe."

The primary aim of his command, said Arnold, "is to make the coming invasion of Germany as economical as possible by drastically reducing the war potential of the Third Reich and its satellites."

His report included these statements:

"Our strategic air plan is predicated on the fundamental fact that our bombers can fly deep into enemy territory, drop an effective load of bombs, and return to base without losses disproportionate to the damage accomplished. We have proved that we can do this."

The destruction of the enemy's fighter strength is aimed at through two methods—the bombing of

Practical Joker Held As 'Hot Foot' Kills Man

Detroit, Jan. 3 (INS).—Authorities tonight were holding Herbert Pomerenke, 30, a war plant worker, while they investigated the death of Louis Marino, 20. Marino died seven hours after a joker's "hot foot" set fire to his oil soaked clothes. Pomerenke admitted inserting a lighted match in the sole of Marino's shoe.

2 Nip Cruisers Are Set Ablaze As Carriers Raid Kavieng

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Tuesday), Jan. 4 (AP). Bombers and fighters from a carrier force under the South Pacific command sent New Year's greetings to Japanese naval units in the harbor of Kavieng, New Ireland, in the form of bombs, torpedoes and machine gun fire which hit and set afire two heavy cruisers and damaged two destroyers.

The warships were attacked early in the morning, just as they were about to enter the harbor by fighters and bombers in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire. One destroyer was hit with bombs and torpedoes, the other heavily strafed, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique said today.

The attack was a duplicate of another carrier-borne plane assault on this important enemy base made Christmas morning, when the American warbirds sank a destroyer, damaged another and sank two big 10,000-ton cargo ships.

Objectives Secured

Veterans of the Sixth Army's 32nd Division who landed at Saidor, on the north coast of New Guinea, last Sunday have overcome light enemy resistance and have secured their objectives, the communique said.

The objectives were not mentioned in detail. But the announcement yesterday of their landing at Saidor said the harbor and an unused air strip slightly inland had been taken.

The fliers shot down 11 of 30 intercepting planes over the Kavieng target, and probably four others were destroyed.

Bombers and fighters attacked the Lakunai airdrome at Rabaul, New Britain, New Year's Day and did heavy damage despite intercepting efforts of 80 Japanese fighters. The enemy lost 19 planes, and all American planes returned. Our bag brought to 160 the total over Rabaul in 10 days, against the Allies' loss of slightly more than 20.

Marine patrols at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, have advanced from the airdrome, which the Leathernecks captured, December 30, after fierce fighting, to a village about 4 miles west of the cape. Another marine force which landed west of the cape, on the westernmost tip of New Britain, has advanced 3 miles south as far as Sag Sag without contacting the enemy.

Clash At Arawe

American outposts at Arawe, the invasion beachhead established by Sixth Army units, December 15, on the southwest coast of New Britain, clashed with Japanese units the night of January 1, killing 14.

Australians on the Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, are pushing north of Nuzen which they captured January 1. This coastal force and the American invasion troops at Saidor compose the jaws of a nutcracker operation which, MacArthur said, means "disintegration and destruction" for the Japanese in between.

Hundreds Trapped

Second 1000-Ton Blow by RAF Paralyzes Traffic in Berlin

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—Berlin was ripped and seared by another 1000 tons of explosives and incendiaries early today in the second similar assault in two days by RAF bombers spilling doom from the skies.

Hitler's chancellery was made a shambles by block-busters, with hundreds of persons believed trapped in its big shelter, Swedish travelers said. "There was no indication of Hitler's whereabouts.

Two fires were burning in the chancellery ruins at 8 a. m. The Tempelhof Airdrome's main administration building also was ablaze. In the factory district of southeastern Berlin, considerable damage was reported.

Only Subways Running

Traffic was paralyzed. Subway trains alone were functioning. Newspapers were printed, but were not delivered. There were no bread deliveries.

The streets were clear of snow, but the penetrating cold worked great hardship.

Lancasters and Halifaxes bored through a freezing 90-mile-an-hour gale and a strong barrage of fighters to hit the capital at 3 a.m. —the same hour as on Sunday—in the tenth mammoth raid since November 18.

Those 10 attacks have dumped more than 14,000 tons of bombs on Berlin—twice what London took in 11 months—and the Nazi center appeared marked for building-by building extinction.

Hails of flak and swarms of fighters failed to halt the RAF, which lost 27 bombers ove. Berlin and in other operations. Twenty-eight fell the previous night when Hamburg was also hit.

Thick Flak Reported

One airman declared "the flak was so thick we could have stuck our wheels down and ridden on it."

New-type flares, shot from the ground, guided the German fighters, which began attacking far from Berlin.

Two "large concentrations of fires" were left in the city, the Air Ministry said.

Swedish travelers, who termed the assault the "worst raid we've yet experienced," said a block-buster must have smashed Hitler's huge gray stone chancellery running a full block from Wilhelmsplatz to Hermann Goering Strasse along Voss Strasse.

"Buildings across the street also suffered" in this heart of the government center, they added. "We heard that hundreds of persons were trapped in the tremendous shelter built under the chancellery."

Early in the war, Hitler used to turn over the chancellery shelter to children and expectant mothers.

"Potsdamerplatz looked as though

Westward, Ho!

London (Tuesday), Jan. 4 (AP).—Soviet tank columns swept into old Poland yesterday, toppling Novograd-Volynski and the prewar border town of Olevsk en route, and a Moscow bulletin early today said the Red Army killed 6000 Germans in its unchecked offensive over territory which the enemy had held since the first month of the conflict.

Hundreds of Germans were surrendering, throwing down their arms and going "over to the side of the Red army" by entire companies, said a midnight communique describing one of the worst Nazi debacles since the Stalingrad disaster.

Huge quantities of war equipment fell to Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's forces, which included Siberian infantrymen. The torrent of power unleashed by the First Ukraine Army crumbled the German lines over the entire area opposite central Poland. The border recognized by Moscow, however, lies 150 miles beyond captured Olevsk, once a customs station 7 miles from Poland.

Order of the Day Issued

Premier Joseph Stalin in an order of the day late yesterday announced the capture of Novograd-Volynski, a rail and road hub 15 miles from the former frontier.

General Vatutin, cocaptor of Kharkov and the liberator of Kiev, now has led his men 760 miles from Stalingrad. Berlin lies less than 600 miles to the west, and the Russians are driving ahead on a 60-mile front.

Novograd-Volynski, 42 miles below Olevsk, was stormed and taken by "a decisive offensive of tank and infantry formations," Stalin's order of the day said. He termed the town of 18,000 "a large railway junction and an important stronghold of German defenses."

Emilcheno, 30 miles north of Novograd-Volynski, and Rogachev, 13 miles below, also were seized.

Soviet War Cost Nazis 8 Million Men, Writer Says

London, Jan. 3 (INS).—Reuter's Moscow correspondent, Harold King, estimated today the Germans have lost eight million troops killed or captured since the start of the Soviet-German war. The Red army, he said, probably lost 4,500,000 men killed or missing. A Reuters commentator said there is "good reason to believe Germany's strategic reserves of manpower are at a very low ebb."

Accusation

By Joseph Paull

A group of 28 men and two women, spread throughout the Nation, entered into a carefully planned plot inspired by the Nazi Party to impair the morale and loyalty of the armed forces and to accomplish the objective of the Germna Reich to establish a National Socialist form of government in the United States, a special District grand jury found in an indictment returned yesterday.

Twenty-two of this group were already under indictment on similar but less inclusive charges. The other eight were added by the grand jury which for three months scanned evidence obtained by law enforcement officers in four years.

The true bill declared that by pamphlets, books and circulars, the accused attempted to indoctrinate this country with ideas that democracy is decadent and Naziism the system of the future; the Government is "controlled by Communists, international Jews and plutocrats"; the U. S. provoked war with the Axis; the President invited the Pearl Harbor attack as a means of getting the country into a foreign war; and Communists, Jews and war profiteers are preventing an honorable and just peace.

Thus, the grand jury upheld the contention of far-sighted groups which contended that spreading

U. S. Shipyards Break Records, Top '43 Goal

Built 208 Vessels at Rate of 45 Tons Per Minute in December

By Walter Wood

America built ships at the rate of three-fourths-of-a-ton-a-second (45 tons a minute) last month to better the 1943 goal set by President Roosevelt and break all previous shipbuilding records.

Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping Administrator, announced yesterday that 208 vessels, totaling 2,044,239 deadweight tons, came off the ways in December. This brings to 1896 the total number of ships built in 1943 and to 19,238,626 the number of deadweight tons.

The goal set by the President for the WSA was less than 18 million tons.

All-Time High

The all-time high in December totals more than all the deliveries from the Nation's shipyards between 1939 and 1941, it was said.

End-to-end, the vessels built last month would stretch from Washington to Philadelphia, approximately 130 miles, a spokesman said.

Admiral Land told reporters next year's goal will tentatively set at 20 million tons, but that the program was flexible and would put "quality, not quantity" first.

The new year, said the War Shipping administrator, will be the "toughest, hardest and best year of the war."

He said "all hands" should remember:

"It is swell to hire, but it's hell to fire!"

Gives New Slogan

Giving his new slogan as "Let's win the war in forty-four," Land admonished newsmen to note that he said "WIN the war," not "END the war."

Draft Policy Changed Again For Fathers on U. S. Payrolls

By Jerry Kluttz

The draft policy for Government fathers has been changed again.

Briefly, the Government will have a uniform father draft policy and this policy will be laid down by War Manpower's Central Review Committee instead of each agency fixing its own individual policy.

War Manpower yesterday rescinded its order of a few days ago which gave agency deferment committees the authority to handle the father draft problem and to carry out the President's wish that Government fathers "be given consideration for occupational deferment similar to that accorded to fathers employed outside the Federal Government." The order also said in part:

Agency committees are now authorized to request 60-day deferments for pre-Pearl Harbor fathers who are necessary to the war program. Within the 60-day period the review committee will check the requests. Some deferments will be authorized for a longer period and others, of course, will be canceled. All father deferments requests must be made before January 15, the day Selective Service will lift the ban on the drafting of Government fathers. The new procedure will not modify the list of "key" positions nor will it invalidate the replacement schedules.

Agency committees must submit detailed data on each father up for deferment and it appears likely that the central committee will set up standards which fathers must meet before it will recommend deferment beyond the temporary 60-day period. The War Manpower has asked for this information on all fathers who are granted the 60-day stay: name, age, position, grade and salary, educational background, experience background for the past 10 years—Government as well as private employment—date of appointment in the agency, time in present position, and the number of children and the ages of each. Despite the President's order for equal treatment of Government fathers the new procedure could put them at a clear disadvantage. It all will depend on the policy of the central committee and that is not clear.

Another point bothering Federal officials is when to request deferments. It is reported on good

Blast Rocks New York

U. S. Destroyer Blown to Pieces, Another Torpedoed in Atlantic

Unnamed Vessel Reported Sunk by Navy; Details Held

An American destroyer was torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic on Christmas Eve, the Navy announced yesterday. It was the fourth American destroyer reported lost during recent days.

Details of the torpedoing and sinking were withheld by the Navy, apparently until next of kin of the casualties could be notified.

The announcement failed to explain whether the torpedo was launched by enemy submarine, plane or surface vessel.

The other destroyers reported lost during the last week are the Perkins, sunk in a collision off New Guinea, a second destroyer which Navy Secretary Knox said was lost during the operations against Cape Gloucester, New Britain, and an unnamed destroyer which blew up and sank off New York yesterday.

Last November the destroyer Borie had to be sunk by American forces after she had been badly damaged while ramming a German submarine during a spectacular battle in the Atlantic.

Before the Borie was sunk, the last American destroyers reported lost in the Atlantic were the Sturtevant, which went down after an underwater explosion off Florida in April, 1942, and the Jacob Jones, which was torpedoed and sunk off Cape May, N. J., in February, 1942.

163 Survivors, 108 Wounded, Rescued Off Coney Island

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—A United States destroyer blew apart near the entrance of New York Bay today with an explosion so terrific it hurled men and guns into the sea.

The blazing ship sank in 40 minutes, as Coast Guard craft edged to her side to rescue 163 men, including 108 injured.

Hours after the first blast, which occurred at 6:18 a. m. (EWT), the Navy said the cause had not yet been determined. There was no announcement regarding loss of life, but destroyers in wartime carry crews ranging from 150 to 300 men.

The blast, breaking windows ashore and arousing thousands of New Yorkers from their beds, ripped the ship as she was preparing to get underway 6 miles northeast of Sandy Hook, N. J., and just a few miles off Coney Island, N. Y., naval spokesmen said.

Second Explosion

An eyewitness said another explosion "split her in two" about five minutes after the vessel was abandoned at 7:05 a. m. It sank a short time later.

The spokesmen gave no indication of whether the sinking could be attributed to a torpedo attack, a mine or an accident.

Survivors told of crewmen manning hoselines to fight the fire, despite explosions of the ship's own burning shells, and of heroic rescue work by the Coast Guard, but they gave no indication of the blast's origin.

One survivor said that a crewman, found drifting on a mattress, "must have been blown through

Fighting Near Pescara

Snow, Sleet, Rain, Icy Gales Stall 5th, 8th Armies in Italy

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Jan. 3 (AP).—Snow, sleet and rain, whipped by an icy gale, stalled the Fifth and Eighth Armies on the Italian Front except for spasmodic fighting some nine miles from Pescara on the Adriatic Coast, where the Nazis are stubbornly resisting a Canadian advance.

(The Cairo radio reported that Fifth Army troops had crossed the Garigliano River in several places near the western end of the battle line.)

Eighth Army artillery was in range of Pescara, but a dispatch from a correspondent with the Canadians today gave no indication the key port was being shelled. The Germans still are in possession of high ground between the coastal road and the sea, about a mile south of the Tesore River, and will have to be gouged out by infantry before the advance on Pescara can continue.

Over roads turned into a morass, vehicles took seven hours for a trip normally requiring half an hour. Fighting in such conditions was next to impossible.

Air operations, after having been at a standstill for two days, were resumed yesterday, and a communique said fighters and fighter bombers scored "widespread damage" on enemy motor transports and railway rolling stock.

Medium bombers attacked enemy rail communications at Taggia, Ventimiglia and Arma Riva on the Italian Riviera, smashed rail yards at Terni, 49 miles northeast of Rome and at Anagni, 35 miles southeast of Rome, and docks at Civitavecchia on the west coast.

Cold May Keep Roosevelt From Talk in Congress

Still suffering from the effects of a cold which developed into grip, President Roosevelt remained in bed yesterday and there was a possibility that he might be unable to deliver his annual message to Congress in person a week from now.

Mr. Roosevelt had no fever but his illness had sapped some of his strength. The White House said a decision on whether he would deliver his annual message in person, as has been his custom, was entirely up to his physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire.

Roosevelts Deed Hyde Park Home To Government

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 3 (AP).—President and Mrs. Roosevelt have deeded the family homestead and 33 acres of land at Hyde Park to the United States Government for use as a "national historic site."

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt signed the deed Thursday in Washington, and Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, accepted the gift Friday. The papers were filed in Dutchess County Court Saturday.

The President presented the Roosevelt Library and 16 acres of land to the Government July 24, 1939.

The new title transfer grants the President and his immediate family use of the home during their lifetimes, and provides that town, county and State taxes shall be paid by the Roosevelts.

Yugoslavs Battle To Take Banjaluka

China Duty

Gen. Sultan Made Deputy To Stilwell

Maj. Gen. Daniel Isom Sultan, 58, the District's Engineer Commissioner from 1934 to 1938, has been appointed deputy commander in chief of the U. S. Army Forces in China, Burma and India under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, it was announced yesterday from Delhi.

SULTAN

Maj. Gen. Sultan was graduated in 1907 from the United States Military Academy. He was assigned to Washington Barracks in 1912 and was graduated from the Engineers School at that post.

After service overseas in the World War, he returned to Washington, where he was on the general staff from 1919 to 1922. In 1926 he was graduated from the Army War College and until 1929 he was a resident member of the Board of Engineers and Harbors. From July, 1931, till January, 1932, he was here as a member of the Interoceanic Canal Board in the Office of the Chief of Engineers.

Hitler Youth's Diary Relates Hate for Nazis

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Jan. 3 (AP).—Headquarters today released a diary of a former storm troop leader in the Hitler youth movement captured in Italy, which showed that the young Nazi had had a complete change of heart after less than a year of fighting. Extracts included these:

Jan. 15, 1943—"What excitement. My first day as a real soldier."

Jan. 3, 1942—"Fitted out in uniform. I look fine, if a littl odd."

In September, the former storm troop leader came to Italy, and in November the tone of the diary changed. There were references to the weight of "Tommy's artillery fire" and the number of German casualties.

In December: "I wish I was an Englishman. All this retreating does not agree with me."

On December 22, the day before his capture::

"Yesterday night, during retreat, I broke finally and irrevocably with my old life. Gone are all the old values, all t at was precious to me. In my soul only onc thing remains, hatred for the bestiality of the German army. For at last one is human.

"What have we to fight for? Everyone cursed the Nazi government but few have the courage to run against it. Why? Because brutality and the power of oppression are still strong. If only the opportunity offered, I would help strengthen the thousands who long for the day of the final collapse . . .

"If I ever survive to leave the front alive at least I shall have seen through the tawdry facade of Nazi politics, I shall know the points at which the Nazi are weakest . . . Why was I born a German? I feel myself always a slave."

Partisans Hold Half of City in Central Bosnia

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—Partisan armies of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), now reported officered in part by Allied commanders, presumably were still engaged tonight in a fight to complete capture of Banjaluka, mining and agricultural center in central Bosnia and Yugoslavia's fourth city.

(International News Service transmitted a London Daily Mirror report from Stockholm saying Allied and Italian troops have landed in Yugoslavia.

(The paper said the landing partion for the Allied invasion.)

Broz' communique today said the Partisans had captured half the city and that many German officers and men have been taken prisoner in bloody street fighting. The city is headquarters for the Second German Tank Army charged with defending the Nazi-held Adriatic coast.

(A Budapest dispatch said many of Tito's divisions now were commanded by Allied officers, presumably American and British. It added rumors were rife in Belgrade that the Allies were getting ready for an invasion of Yugoslavia by landings on the Dalmatian coast.

London Yugoslavs meantime were awaiting the arrival of a military delegation from Broz which they were confident would shape up the invasion program. They said the delegation probably would go to Ankara before proceeding here.

The Yugoslavs said Partisans also had laid siege to the German garrison at Novo Mesto, 40 miles east of Zagreb in eastern Slovenia, 30 miles from the Italian border.

In eastern Bosnia, Hercegovina and Montenegro, hard fighting was in progress with the partisans on the offensive.

The Germans were taken by surprise by the partisan attack on Banjaluka New Year's Eve. The city is a Moslem stronghold, and a rail center of 17,000.

Yugoslavs Flying Now

Cairo, Jan. 30 (AP).—American-trained Yugoslav airmen, flying Liberators presented to the Yugoslav air force by President Roosevelt, have averaged two operational flights a day in the last two months.

They are attached to the U. S. 15th Air Force. Two of the Yugoslav Liberators have been lost. By agreement they are never used against targets in Yugoslavia.

Red Army Storms Into Old Poland

The Russians were advancing from 10 to 15 miles daily.

To the southwest the rail junction of Berdichev, headquarters of German Field Marshal Gen. Fritz von Mannstein until the rout began, was half surrounded and expected to fall shortly.

Near Rumanian Border

Farther south the Russians pressing toward the Rumanian frontier were reported within 20 miles of the rail station of Vinnitsa on the Kiev-Zhmerinka Line. Vinnitsa is an enemy stronghold near the upper Bug River. The Russians not only were seeking to outflank the river defenses, but also were striking toward Zhmerinka, a vital rail objective.

The Germans in the Dnieper bend apparently were faced with a hard choice between two courses—and in either case must act quickly. They must withdraw as quickly as possible from the southern Ukraine or send ill-spared reserves into counterattacks.

It was estimated the Germans need from 150,000 to 300,000 reserves in southern Russia if they are to avoid disaster.

The Germans are estimated to have 500,000 to 750,000 men in southern Russia, including those bottled up in the Crimea. Three Russian armies are exerting constant pressure on them—waiting apparently to hit them in full force when Vatutin slashes the enemy's main arteries in the rear.

Amid these stunning Russian successes, Berlin announced that Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's army on the front above the Ukraine had launched a new offensive west of Gomel in lower White Russia.

The Russians drove a deep wedge into German lines, but Nazi units later sealed it off, the Germans said.

For weeks Rokossovsky has been within 8 miles of Zhlobin, a rail junction on the railway leading north to Vitebsk in upper White Russia, and have been threatening to turn the entire southern flank of the enemy in that sector.

To the north, Vitebsk itself slowly was being strangled, with Russian units only 5 miles from the last rail ay escape route from that important German stronghold. Farther north other Russian units were slashing through frozen lake country within 45 miles of the Latvian border from their jumping-off base at Nevel, capturing 70 localities to the north of that town.

This apparently was a move by Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian to strengthen his right flank before resuming his march toward Latvia.

Stockholm dispatches said German military commanders had ordered a total blackout for cities and villages in all of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, presumably in anticipation of increased blows by the Red air force on the Baltic Front.

U. S. Destroyer Blown to Pieces; Terrific Blast Rocks New York

the side of the ship," possibly indicating an internal explosion.

The fire centered in the forward part of the destroyer.

Residents over a radius of about 20 miles in Manhattan, northern New Jersey and western Long Island heard the tremendous roar.

The reverberations broke many windows in the Queens section of Long Island, and in several stores in Coney Island and the Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn.

Some seaside residents said they were knocked from their beds.

Hundreds of bottles of blood plasma were sent to the injured men by ten Army, Navy and Coast Guard hospitals in the area. A Coast Guard helicopter took 200 units of plasma to the victims.

Philip Wells, seaman second class from Roslindale, Mass., expressed the belief that the lives of many men had been saved because they did not like what was served them for breakfast. All ate fast and had left their forward mess when that part of the ship blew up.

"There was no order given, bu everyone pitched in," he said in telling of the rescue work. He helped wounded to the stern of the ship, tearing up one man's sweater to make a tourniquet for his bleeding arm.

With forty-millimeter shells "popping off all around us," the stricken warship "looked just like the Wasp when she sank," Chief Machinist's Mate Rene H. Pincetl, 32, of San Diego, Calif., said.

Oil was blazing and ammunition exploding as the men abandoned ship, the begrimed and haggard survivor said.

"The Coast Guard ship was tied up right alongside, nosed into our stern. They did a wonderful job. I saw them pull one man aboard who was badly burned. He was Jack Paulson, fireman second class,

As the men went overboard, Pincetl recalled, he saw a shipmate carrying their mascot, "Turn-To."

Arnold Cites Air Supremacy

World's Largest Air Force

The United States now has "the world's largest air force," manned by 2,385,000 officers and men.

The War Production Board has 145,000 planes scheduled for production during the next 15 months.

When Japanese planes flew in over American air fields on the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands on December 7, 1941, we had a total of 526 planes suited for combat in defense of the islands—"within a few hours that number was reduced to 176."

New Routes Mapped

The Air Transport Command now has 110,000 miles of routes. A chart discloses such new and remote routes as one running northward to Baffin Land at the northeastern corner of the American continent, and another reaching the big mineral producing area in South Africa. "On one recent day 680,000 pounds of materiel, munitions and supplies were delivered by air to one theater of operations."

During one year of operation in the Mediterranean theater, from November 8, 1942, through November 7, 1943, Allied aircraft dropped 92,233 tons of bombs on enemy installations and supply routes, of which 65,377 tons were dropped by the AAF. The targets were in Austria, Yugoslavia, Greece, Albania and France as well as in North Africa. In that theater, "we destroyed in aerial combat and on the ground 5511 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 750 and damaged 1903."

"Two years after Pearl Harbor it is now plain that for us the beginning has ended; for our enemies, the end has begun."

"What American and Royal Air Force bombers can do to the whole German war machine once the German fighter force is rendered impotent needs no comment," he asserted. "The issue hangs now on which side first falters, weakens and loses its punishing power."

His report also disclosed that:

The weight of heavy bombers to be produced in the United States during the next 18 months will exceed that of all types of planes produced in the first 18 months of the war:

Up to last October 1, 26,900 planes had been flown to our Allies under lend-lease, of which Russia received 7000.

Flight weather forecasting has progressed to such an extent that preparations now can be made 30 days in advance.

Jap Drive Poses Problem

The Nation's air chief said that the all-out air bombardment of Japan would be neither simple nor soon.

Declaring that "supply is our problem in China," Arnold explained that every item of equipment necessary for the operation and maintenance of the Fourteenth Air Force must be flown in from the outside and that this procedure must continue "until such time as we conquer the territory and build the road into China, and/or capture a seaport."

He cited this as an example of the supply problem:

"In the round-trip over the hump (the high eastern spur of the Himalayan Mountains) between Assam and Kunming, the C-87 Transport now in use can deliver four tons of 100-octane gasoline. To do so, the airplane must consume 3½ tons of the same precious commodity.

"The crews of a heavy bombardment group in China must ferry over their own gasoline, bombs, replacement parts and everything else in their own B-24's (the C-87 is a converted B-24). Before this bombardment group can go on one combat flight, it must make four trips over the hump."

Blow Hurt U. S.

Here is the previously undisclosed magnitude of the disaster that all but wiped out our air force in the Pacific when the Japanese struck:

We had a total of 526 planes of all types deployed on the morning of December 7, 1941, to meet possible attacks on the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands.

"Within a few hours that number was reduced to 176."

Arnold said that December 7 found the Army Air Forces "equipped with plans but not with planes . . . our combat strength (for the whole Nation) was little better than a corporal's guard of some 3000 planes; of these only 1157 were actually suited to combat service."

The work of the Japanese at the Army's Hickam and Wheeler Fields in Hawaii was "fully as thorough as at Pearl Harbor," Arnold commented bitterly, referring to the destruction the enemy wrought on our Pacific Fleet in the big Hawaiian naval base.

"They smashed our airdromes, caught most of our planes on the ground, and left us without any hope of continuing our reinforcement of the Philippine air arm via Hawaii," he said. "On the island of Luzon they disposed of two-thirds of our strength before we could recover from the surprise attack and rebuild our air defenses."

But here Arnold disclosed another and associated factor in the attack. He reported:

"On Luzon, it must be said, we had maintained an air alert since November 15.

"Even so, General MacArthur reported that at the end of the first day of war there were only 17 heavy bombers and approximately 70 fighters left out of a force of 35 B-17's, 30 medium and eight light bombers, 220 fighters and 23 other airplanes. In the days that followed, 14 of the B-17's managed to get to Australia, but the fighters were destroyed one after the other.

"Our last two worn-out P-40's sank a couple of Japanese ships with 500-pound bombs that had been hitched to the wings. This was the origin of our fighter bombers."

(Another of a series of articles on details in General Arnold's report will appear tomorrow.—Editor's Note.)

Nazi Regime In Bulgaria Fights Crisis

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 3.—Telephone and telegraph communication with Bulgaria, broken off suddenly yesterday without explanation, remained severed today amid reports that the pro-Nazi government of Premier Dobri Bojilov had fallen.

Unverified reports said the regency of Hitler's wavering Balkan satellite was having difficulty in finding a new government.

A cabinet crisis was reported only last month, and there have been repeated reports of peace feelers coming from the troubled Balkan kingdom.

(London heard on December 15 that the Bulgarian army had demanded a new regency and a new government. These reports said Col. Damian Veltchev, described as pro-Ally, had been mentioned as Bojilov's probable successor.)

Bulgaria weathered a crisis in her relations with Germany last August, when King Boris died under mysterious circumstances shortly after returning from Germany, where he conferred with Hitler.

His 6-year-old son, Simeon II, succeeded to the throne under a regency headed by Prince Cyril, Queen Mother Ioanna and former Premier Bogdan Philov.

Bulgaria was the first of the Kaiser's allies to sue for peace during the closing months of the last war.

A Turkish correspondent wrote from Budapest, "It is expected the Bulgarian Government will be replaced by a government including all leaders of Bulgaria's democratic parties. However, a change in foreign policy is not expected. The change will be made to unite the nation before taking decisions for which a strong government will be needed."

He said the last air raid on Sofia caused 1500 deaths and injured 5000 persons, destroyed 900 buildings and damaged 2000.

Nazi Radio In Muddle on U. S. Strikes

New York, Jan. 3 (INS).—The Berlin radio, commenting on the American railway nad steel disputes contradicted itself today in broadcasts.

In one, the Nazis said Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army, had compared strikes or strike threats to a "first class military defeat."

This broadcast asserted that Germany was "justified in pointing toward the inner conflict in the United States." It went on to say that "Marshall used sharper words in the press conference than American reporters have ever heard from an American general."

Another broadcast, however, denied that German propagandists have tried to capitalize on the threatened railway strike.

"Americans, in their ignorance of European conditions, still expect an uprising in Germany, although they exposed themselves to worldwide ridicule by announcing a revolution for Noverber 11," 1943," it said.

(No such American announcement was ever made.) The Berlin broadcaster then continued:

"Now the alleged exploitation of a threatened strike of United States railwaymen by German propaganda is blamed for the failure of U. S. hopes at the end of last year.

"It is alleged that German propaganda has been spreading sensational news that chaos was reigning in the United States. We leave it to our listeners to judge for themselves what is the basis for these allegations."

Chancellery in Berlin Wrecked

it was completely destroyed." A Swedish businessman said Berlin's air raid alarm system appeared to have been disrupted.

A Stockholm newspaper said 2760 dead had been counted, 70 per cent of them workers forced to carry on in factories during the raid.

The Vichy radio reported an attack on Nice in southern France.

A German broadcast, quoting Paris newspapers, said Allied raids on France from October 1 to December 31 had killed 11,813 persons, injured 17,741, and left about 1,000,000 bombed out.

A few German planes raided England, killing one woman and injuring several persons in a southeast town. Four craft were shot down.

Argentina Recognizes Bolivia Regime

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Jan. 3 (AP).—Argentina tendered formal recognition to the revolutionary government of Maj. Gualberto Villarroel of Bolivia today, thereby becoming the first to respond to the intensive diplomatic gestures of the La Paz regime to secure a standing among Western Hemisphere nations.

Foreign Minister Alberto Gilbert announced recognition of the government next door, and thereby maintained Argentina's tradition of acting independently in international affairs.

Argentina did not participate in the recent resolution of the Inter-American Committee for Political Defense of the Continent at Montevideo, Uruguay, which proposed that American nations consult and study carefully any governments established by force before extending recognition.

The action today was an additional link in the already considerable bonds of sympathy between the Argentine government of Gen. Pedro Ramirez and the Bolivian regime of Major Villarroel. Both reached power by armed revolution and both are nationalistic.

New Shipbuilding Record Is Set

War Shipping Administrator, said the United States could produce 25 million tons of shipping in 1944, "if anybody wanted to build 25 million tons."

Land, however, emphasized that shipbuilding programs this year will be designed to meet specific military requirements. At present, he said, landing craft are being given number one priority.

The WSA head was confident that American and United Nations shipping will be adequate to keep supplies moving when the all-out European invasion begins.

130,000 Men at Sea

The conference also brought out:

1. The American merchant marine actually at sea totals 130,000 men as compared with 45,000 before Pearl Harbor. WSA's recruitment and manning program can furnish 5000 seamen a month to the shipping industry. These are exclusive of men furnished by unions.

2. Renegotiation of shipbuilding contracts by voluntary agreement has eliminated $85,495,000 in excess profits and brought an additional reduction of $57,322,000 in prices originally set forth in existing contracts.

3. The new speedy Victory ships, the first of which will be launched from Henry J. Kaiser's yard in Portland, Oreg., January 12, will be named for United Nations, having such names as "China Victory," "Poland Victory," etc.

The breakdown of December production figures was given as follows:

Liberty ships, 118; C-1's, 6; C-2's, 10; C-3's, 4; C-4's, 2; T-2 Tankers, 22; Liberty ships converted to tankers, 13; Coastal Tankers, 2; Coastal cargo, 1 concrete; concrete barges, 4; frigates, 15; auxiliary aircraft carriers, 5; P-2's, 1; seagoing tugs, 5; total vessels, 208; total deadweight tons, 2,044,239.

First Liberty Ship To Sail Potomac

The first Liberty Ship to navigate the Potomac will sail into Washington for the opening of the Fourth War Loan Drive January 18, Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping Administrator, announced yesterday.

One of Maritime Service's training ships, she is named the American Mariner and will give residents of the District and nearby areas a chance to see one of the vessels and learn how their war bond money is being invested in the merchant marine.

Truman Committee Orders Liberty Ship Inquiry

By the Associated Press

An investigation into possible faults that reportedly have caused some Liberty ships to break apart was ordered yesterday by the Senate's Truman War Investigating Committee.

Chairman Truman said he acted after Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, had said in Seattle that he would call for a halt in conversions of Liberty ships to troop carriers pending an inquiry by the Truman Committee into reports that five of the vessels have broken apart at sea.

Officer Slugged, And $33,000 Stolen

Boston, Jan. 3 (AP).—Two gunmen in an automobile with New York tags slugged House Officer Mark Ellis of the Copley Plaza Hotel while he was on his way to a bank today, and escaped with the weekend receipts of $17,000 cash and $16,000 in checks.

Police found the New York car abandoned.

Green Says Marshall Made Blast at Rail, Steel Unions

in his recent irresponsible attack on this organization."

In his message to Nelson, Murray said he was sending a copy to Marshall, "who is entitled to know the situation in steel, on the eve of the invasion of Europe."

"He ought to know," Murray said, "that the United Steel Workers of America in 1943 helped give our armed forces more steel than they could use and that we are prepared to do the same in 1944. As chief of staff, he must have true facts at his fingertips, rather than mere vicious conjecture couched in terms of psychology."

Early did not identify the source of the story other than to say that it was "a little bit more military" than the President.

Asked if it was proper to deduce that the Chief Executive agreed with the anonymous authority, Early said:

"I don't know whether there is any relation or connection. One probably is a little bit more military than the other, you see. That is his responsibility, entirely and completely, and is it the President's as Commander in Chief. I don't think they are connected or related except as they seem to have been thinking along the same lines."

Several members of Congress issued statements calling upon the unnamed source to identify himself, but the Senate Truman Committee by a unanimous action of members present, turned down a request by railroad unions, that it investigate the charges. Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, said:

"The members of the committee were unanimously of the opinion that this matter is outside our jurisdiction.

Asked for personal comment, Truman replied:

"All I can say is that I wish the spokesman had not made it."

It was understood that General Marshall has invited some members of the House and Senate to dinner this week.

La Follette's View

Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin asked that the source be identified, and said:

"In my opinion American labor has been falsely accused. The war production records of American industry are incontrovertible testimonials of labor's patriotic devotion and achievements.

"If the 'personage' who has chosen to make dastardly charges against labor which are tantamount to treason itself and who deliberately seeks to sow the seeds of hate and diunity among Americans at this time when unity is so important does not come forward voluntarily and show himself, I think it would be well for some appropriate committee of the Senate to investigate, reveal the personage, and force him to back up his charges or recant publicly."

Senators Johnson of Colorado and Wheeler of Montana, both Democrats, asked that the official reveal himself and "give the basis" of his statement.

No Action by OWI

Palmer Hoyt, retiring director of the Office of War Information Domestic Bureau, told a press conference:

"I think anonymous statements as a general thing are dangerous, both for those who utter them and those who receive them."

He stated that no action by OWI was planned, however.

Green said that the anonymous statements were "a surprise and a shock to labor."

"Let me assure the American people," he said, "that, so far as the members of the American Federation of Labor are concerned, there shall be no interruption of the march to victory in 1944. They have adhered faithfully to the no-strike pledge. They will continue to do so for the duration."

Murray declared that the steel industry was scheduled to operate below capacity this week with 64 open hearth and electric furnaces out of production.

"If the arsenal of democracy is so filled with steel that present operating figures will meet all our war needs, then I again urge you to see that the excess capacity is immediately turned into essential civilian goods."

The nonoperating railroad unions, representing 1,100,000 of the Nation's 1,450,000 railroad workers, are affiliated with the AFL. The steel workers, representing more than 700,000 workers employed in the steel industry, are affiliated with the C. I. O.

No Fixed Method

High Court Upholds FPC Rate Powers

By Edward H. Higgs
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court yesterday gave broad powers to the Federal Power Commission in fixing public utility rates, declaring the commission's rate orders are not subject to Federal court interference unless their "total effect" is "unjust and unreasonable."

Reaffirming a previous decision that the commission is not limited to any single method of evaluating utilities for rate-making purposes, the court's 5-to-3 opinion declared that it is not the valuation theory underlying a rate order "but the impact of the rate order that counts."

Specifically, the court upheld the commission's use of the so-called "prudent investment" method of valuing the Hope Gas Co. in ordering a $3,609,857 annual reduction in the rates on natural gas used in Cleveland and Akron and the Pittsburgh area.

Under the method, advocated by the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis, a utility's value is fixed on the basis of the amount "prudently invested," with certain allowances for depreciation and improvements. The commission had valued the Hope company at $33,712,526 with an allowable annual return of 6½ per cent. The company claimed the valuation should have been 66 million dollars.

In dissenting, Justice Jackson argued that the case should be the occasion for the court's reconsideration of rate-making doctrine as applied to natural gas and should be returned to the commission for further action with that aim.

"The service one renders to society in the gas business," Jackson said, "is measured by what he gets out of the ground, not by what he puts into it, and there is little more relation between the investment and the results than in a game of poker."

Selective Service Rule

In another action yesterday, the court ruled that a Selective Service Board's order to report for induction must be obeyed by a draft registrant before he can challenge in the courts the classification given him by the board.

The decision applied to Nick Falbo of West Newton, Pa., a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, who contended he should have been classed as a minister, exempt from military service, instead of a conscientious objector. He failed to obey a board order to report at a work camp and subsequently was sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

In other cases yesterday the court:

Ruled that revocation of an OPA maximum price regulation "did not prevent indictment and conviction for violation of its provisions at a time when it remained in force."

Ruled that the Federal "kickback" statute applies to a foreman who, unknown to his employer, was alleged to force workmen under his supervision to pay him part of their wages.

Peonage Case

Ruled in an 8-1 decision by Justice Roberts that an indictment charging a person with arrest of another for purposes of peonage, as defined by a post-Civil War statute, need not allege that any labor actually was performed.

Refused to review an Eighth Federal Circuit Court decision which said it is a "matter of common knowledge" that beer is "intoxicating." The Circuit Court had upheld the conviction of Fred Wayne of Rolla, N. Dak., on a charge of selling beer to an Indian ward of the Government.

Denied the Alliance Brass & Bronze Co. of Alliance, Ohio, permission to institute proceedings—without first going to lower courts—attacking the constitutionality of the War Department's authority to renegotiate war contracts.

Ruled that the owner of a patent may not use it to "protect the market for a device on which no patent has been granted" but which is utilized in the patented product.

Army Furloughs Will Include Time for Travel

Senator Millikin (Republican) of Colorado was advised yesterday that his recommendation that travel time be allowed enlisted men on furlough had been favorably considered by the War Department.

Soldiers stationed at some distance from their homes, the Senator said, are spending six days or more on trains and buses with the result that the normal 15-day furlough shrinks to little more than half the allotted time. He said he was advised yesterday by letter that the department had issued instructions to camp commanders that where the military situation permits, the normal 15-day furlough may be extended by the amount of travel time involved.

Knollenberg Returns To Yale; USCC Personnel Shifted

New moves were announced yesterday to consolidate foreign economic operations under Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley, but the resignation of another FEA aide was learned of at the same time.

Main developments on the FEA front were:

1. The transfer of personnel from the United States Commercial Co., USCC, originally a subsidiary of Jesse Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corp., will make virtually all foreign purchases of commodities for the United States.

2. The resignation of Bernhard Knollenberg who will leave Saturday to return to Yale University as librarian. Knollenberg, executive adviser to Crowley, is giving up his post as director of the Requirements and Supply Branch of FEA's Bureau of Supplies.

Personnel Transferred

3. The personnel of the foreign commodities division of the Commodity Credit Corporation also was transferred to the FEA. Hereafter, foreign food purchases formerly made by Commodity Credit and the War Food Administration will be handled by FEA, with USCC doing the financing.

4. Foreign representatives of USCC and CCC were simultaneously shifted to FEA missions abroad and were ordered responsible to chiefs of those missions.

The new arrangements went into effect January 1, Crowley disclosed.

"It has been our purpose," he said, "to make the necessary administrative changes in such a manner as to take full advantage of the experience and personnel of the Commodity Credit Corp. and the United States Comercial Co. and to avoid any interruption in the foreign economic program with which they have been concerned."

(Crowley has beenacriticized recently for failing to retain experienced working heads and specialists in the several Government agencies amalgamated under FEA.)

The foreign foods program, it was said, will be in charge of Foodstuffs Division of FEA's Bureau of Supplies and the CCC personnel which have handled purchases and sales of foreign foods, will continue to carry out these functions for FEA.

Imported food will be purchased in accordance with WFA directives, it was said.

"Specialized Fields"

The rubber program, it was noted, will remain under control of Jesse Jones through his RFC rubber subsidiaries. Likewise, FEA is by-passing the petroleum setup. Both are referred to by FEA as "specialized fields."

Knollenberg, who several times previously has been reported ready to quit, has worked out something of a "reverse lend-lease" agreement between himself and Crowley.

While he is resigning his directorship of the Requirements and Supply Branch, Knollenberg is retaining his title of executive adviser and is going back to Yale on "leave of absence." It was noted that he first came to Washington on leave from Yale.

He will be succeeded by S. H. Lebensburger, who for 18 months was chief of the materials and supplies section of old Office of Lend-Lease, one of the agencies taken over by FEA in the mass merger order by President Roosevelt.

Japs After Negotiated Peace, Gen. Edson Says

The Japanese in the Pacific "have at the moment everything they started this war for" and they hope to inflict such heavy casualties on American forces that the United States will agree to a negotiated peace, Brig. Gen. Merritt A. Edson declared yesterday.

Edson, who was chief of staff to Maj. Gen. Julian Smith, commander of the Marine assault on Tarawa, met newsmen in the office of the new commandant of the Marine Corps, Lieut. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift.

Remarking with grim emphasis that "the American public doesn't understand that war is two-sided, that you can't fight it without getting hurt," Edson analyzed in considerable detail the Tarawa operations in which the key atoll of the Gilbert Islands was reconquered from the Japanese last month.

Done According to Plan

Edson said Marines had to jump from their landing boats several hundred yards out and wade in to the beaches because there was not enough water for the landing craft to get closer.

"We had planned what we'd do if we didn't have the water we'd hoped to have, and we carried out that plan," he said.

"The information we had about the tides at Tarawa was sketchy at best—and, our information will be even less as we move on into areas the Japanese have had in their possession all these years."

He said that the preparatory shelling and bombing of Tarawa was "as good support as anyone ever had. But naval guns and artillery can't take out all the opposition. The infantry still can't just walk through. The machine-gunners and riflemen hiding in carefully built pillboxes are very hard to hit."

Like Guadalcanal Losses

Edson said, however, the casualties suffered by the Marines in taking Tarawa were comparable to those suffered in taking Guadalcanal. "The reason most people are more impressed with the cost at Tarawa," he said, "is that at Tarawa we lost as many men in four days of battle as we did during four months on Gudalcanal. In addition, the quick victory at Tarawa saved us a lot of losses from malaria and battle neurosis."

"But Japan still holds what she held before Pearl Harbor—we haven't taken a thing from them that they had before the start of this war," he said. The enemy's shipping losses have been serious, he said, but other losses have been very small compared to his total strength.

Montgomery In London for 'Invasion' Meeting

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—The first meeting of the Allied "Invasion War Council" is imminent and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, whose arrival was disclosed tonight, told friends, "I don't expect to be here long."

Montgomery, designated as commander of British Land Forces for the invasion of Western Europe, added, "I'm always on the move these days."

The Allied air commander, Air Chief Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory, and the U. S. Strategic Air Force commander, Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, also are already in England, and the rest of the invasion command is expected soon.

There is every indication the master plan for the invasion already has been set, needing only the picking of a starting date.

Montgomery, who before leaving the Eighth Army told his troops "the end of the war is definitely in sight," was greeted with cheers when he was quickly recognized in a London hotel lobby.

Truman Balks At Stabilization Exemptions

By Robert C. Albright

Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, co-author of the Senate-passed Truman-Crosser rail pay increase resolution, yesterday flatly opposed "exemption of any group" from the operation of the Stabilization Act.

Truman told newsmen he could not support a move by a House Interstate Commerce Subcommittee to take all workers subject to the Railway Labor Act out from under the stabilization law.

His statement came as Representative Robert Crosser (Democrat) of Ohio tentatively arranged for a meeting Thursday of a subcommittee already instructed by the full House Interstate Commerce Committee to draft such an exemption.

Resolution Sidetracked

The House committee had sidetracked the original Truman-Crosser resolution validating an 8-cent flat pay increase for 1,097,000 non-operating railway employes. Just before Congress adjourned, with the rail strike call still pending, the committee directed the Crosser subcommittee to prepare instead a bill freeing the Railway Act from limitations under any other law.

"I don't think anybody ought to be exempted from the stabilization law" Senator Truman told reporters. "I will continue to support my own resolution which simply certified that the brotherhoods had strictly followed the procedure set up in the Railway Labor Act."

Cites Previous Action

Truman said the brotherhoods initiated their action for a wage increase "long before this series of directives and orders" under the Stabilization law. The first emergency board's May 24 award of an 8-cent hourly increase, he said, followed careful observance by the brotherhoods of every Railway Labor Act requirement.

"I felt, and nearly every Senator felt, we could support them on that basis," Truman said. (His resolution passed the Senate 74 to 4). "But it is quite another matter to approve a broad legislative exemption from the Stabilization Act. I cannot support that."

An August 7 agreement between the carriers and brotherhoods on an 8-cent flat increase was subsequently set aside by Stabilization Director Fred Vinson in favor of a 4 to 10-cent sliding scale recommendation by a second emergency board. The brotherhoods rejected this, and the nonoperating unions took their case to Congress. Congress adjourned without final House action. In the face of a December 30 strike call, full White House mediation failed and on December 27 the Army took over operation of the roads.

Members of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, who adjourned in full expectation that the dispute would be settled by the time Congress returned, will find the hot controversy still in their lap when they meet shortly after January 10.

Representative Crosser, who now favors the broad detachment of railway labor from the operation of any other laws, said his subcommittee meeting here Thursday "was put under obligation by the full committee" to draw the over-all exemption. He predicted the subcommittee will report such a measure to the full committee shortly after Congress returns.

General Uhl Gets 4th Service Command

The War Department announced yesterday that Maj. Gen. Frederick E. Uhl has been assigned to command the Fourth Service Command with headquarters at Atlanta, and that Brig. Gen. Clarence H. Danielson will succeed General Uhl to command the Seventh Service Command with headquarters at Omaha.

Rep. Curley Reindicted In Mail Fraud

Representative James M. Curley of Massachusetts and six other men were indicted yesterday by the District grand jury on 16 charges of conspiracy and mail fraud in the operation of the Engineers' Group, Inc., termed by the Justice Department a "war contracts brokerage racket."

Curley and five of the others previously were indicted on September 16 on similar charges, but the true bill was set aside on the ground that the justice of District Court who empaneled the grand jury was not qualified to do so.

The firm was located at 1022 17th st. nw. in 1941 and has since disbanded.

The new name added to the indictment was David E. Desmond of Boston, a salesman for the Engineers Group. He is described as a stock broker.

Besides Curley, former Governor of Massachusetts, who was said to have been president and director of the firm until December 29, 1941, those indicted previously were:

James G. Fuller, 43, formerly of Washington and now serving a five-year term in Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for sending fraudulent checks through the mail.

Donald Wakefield Smith, of 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., former member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Marshall J. Fitzgerald of 930 16th st. nw., who describes himself as a "legislative counsel."

James B. Underwood, 45, of Louisville, Ky. Now in the Greek Air Force, he is in this country on furlough. Records show he was court-martialed in 1915 on a charge of desertion from the U. S. Army and was convicted by a U. S. Court for China on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Bertram Hall, an engineer, of Dallas, Tex.

The indictment charged the defendants used the mails to defraud 10 industrial concerns of $69,000 in "negotiations" for several million dollars in war contracts. It was said $9000 of this money was returned.

The indictment states the firm convinced customers it could obtain contracts with the Federal Housing Agency, the War and Navy Departments and Amtorg, agency of the Russian government. To be sold, according to the Justice Department, were contracts for materials ranging from munitions to women's gaiters.

The indictment was prepared by Roy Frank, William A. Paisley and Robert W. Strange, special assistants to the Attorney General, under direction of Tom C. Clark, Assistant Attorney General.

Brochures falsely representing members of the Engineers Group had personally planned more than 100 million dollars' worth of construction, the indictment relates, were sent to customers through the mails. Another statement attributed to the firm was that it had a surplus of $225,349.20 on October 14, 1941, when it had no surplus whatsoever.

Britain Said to Have Bases in Madeira

Madrid, Jan. 3 (AP).—The French press carried a dispatch from Lisbon today reporting that the agreement in which Portugal gave Britain use of naval and air bases in the Azores had been extended to include Madeira, and that British forces had landed there.

Firm Indicted For Selling Maps to Nazis

A New York book company, said to have prepared and transmitted to Germany maps requisite for the blitz of the Lowlands and Norway, was indicted in District Court yesterday on charges of failing to register as an agent of the German governnment as required by the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

The defendant, B. Westermann Co., Inc., of New York, is a large book-selling firm said by the Justice Department to be the main clearing house in this country for German propaganda before the war and the payoff rendezvous for Nazi agents.

The indictment further charges Ernest Eisele of Staten Island, N. Y., president of the firm, with aiding and abetting the company in its failure to register as an agent of a foreign principal.

The Justice Department said the Westermann company bought maps from established firms here and transmitted them to Germany shortly before invasions. Included were maps of Norway, Belgium, Holland, street maps of London, Cairo, Istanbul and Izmir, Turkey. Still other maps said to have been transmitted were those of the Malay Peninsula, Colombia, Panama Canal, South America, Trinidad and Jamaica.

Large sums of money, running into the thousands, were paid by the Westermann company to agents and representatives of the German government, it was added.

The indictment charges that between December 13, 1940, and December 8, 1941, the company acted as an agent in the United States of the Reich Ministry of Public Enlightenment and Propaganda; the Cautio Treuhand Gesellschaft of Berlin, an agent of the propaganda ministry; and of August Scherl, G. m. b. H. of Berlin, a Nazi-controlled publishing house.

During this period, the indictment charges, the company was engaged in the "distribution and dissemination within the United States of books, periodicals, pamphlets and newspapers containing articles, comments, editorials and writings dealing with public interests, public relations and public policy which . . . had for their purpose, among others, the influencing, persuading and molding of public opinion in the United States in matters pertaining to political affairs, public relations and foreign and domestic policy."

The case was under the direction of Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark and William Power Maloney, head of the trial division of the Justice Department. They were aided by Isaiah Matlack, James W. Knapp and Mayte B. Greene, special attorneys.

The Westermann Co. until the war, was located in Radio City and was taken over by the Alien Property Custodian.

The maximum penalty for violation of the Foreign Agents Act is a fine of $1000 and imprisonment for two years.

through the country was a movement initiated by the Nazis to weaken the armed forces.

The original probe was a result of research in the field of sedition made by Dillard Stokes, a reporter for The Washington Post and now in the Army.

Those named for the first time in the alleged morale conspiracy were:

Joseph E. McWilliams of New York and Chicago, known for anti-Semitic propaganda. He is the organizer of the Christian Mobilizers.

Lawrence Dennis of New York City, publisher of Our Common Cause, and contributor to other publications. He was described in the best-selling expose, "Under Cover" as the brains behind the Fascist movement in America.

E. J. Parker Sage of Detroit, officer of the National Workers League which published the vitriolic Nationalist Newsletter.

Garland L. Alderman of Detroit, an associate of Sage.

Gerhard W. Kunze, of New York City, head of the German-American Bund after 1939. He was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for espionage and to five years for counseling draft evasion.

August Klapprott, of New York City, deputy leader of the Bund. He was sentenced with Kunze for counseling draft evasion.

Ernest F. Elmhurst, of New York City, author of "The World Hoax."

Peter Stahrenberg, of New York City, publisher of The National American, official organ of the American National Socialist party.

Bench Warrants Authorized

Bench warrants for those not incarcerated were authorized yesterday by Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher. The arrest processes will be served today and will carry a bond recommendation of $2500 for each defendant.

Those reindicted are George E. Deatherage of St. Albans, W. Va.; William Dudley Pelley of Noblesville, Ind.; James True of this city; Edward J. Smythe of New York; H. Victor Broenstrupp of Washington and New York; Robert E. Edmondson of Grass Valley, Calif.; William R. Lyman, jr., of Detroit; Gerald B. Winrod of Wichita, Kans.; Elizabeth Dilling of Chicago; Charles B. Hudson of Omaha, Elmer J. Garner of Wichita, George Sylvester Viereck of New York, Prescott F. Dennett of Washington, Herman Schwinn of Los Angeles, Hans Diebel of Los Angeles, Franz K. Ferenz of Los Angeles, Robert Noble of Los Angeles, Ellis O. Jones of Los Angeles, Eugene N. Sanctuary of New York, David J. Baxter of San Bernardino, Calif.; Lois de Lafayette Washburn of Chicago and Frank W. Clark of Tacoma, Wash.

Not Reindicted

Twelve persons named in the previous true bills were not reindicted. The Justice Department announced it was not dropping charges against these, however.

The investigation will continue, it was said, with the grand jury authorized to sit for three more months. The extent of the probe was not disclosed.

The indictment charges the conspiracy continued from June 28, 1940 until the filing of the indictment.

The maximum penalty for violation of the statute involved is a fine of $10,000 and 10 years' imprisonment.

The indictment charges that in carrying out the conspiracy, the defendants caused to be printed and distributed a flood of propaganda and organized numerous groups, some of which were under direct control of the Nazi Party.

The inquiry is under direction of O. John Rogge, Joseph Burns, John T. M. Reddan and Jean Meyer, special assistants to the Attorney General. The original probes were under direction of William Power Maloney.

Aleutian-Based Planes in Raid On Paramushiro

Army planes presumably based on the western Aleutians bombed the Japanese naval base of Paramushiro on December 31, the Navy Department announced yesterday. Results were not observed, the communique said.

This attack, the fifth against the Kurile Islands enemy center, was made without loss, in sharp contrast with the September 12 raid which cost ten American bombers, four to enemy action, and six which were unable to return.

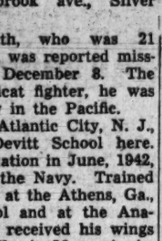
2 D. C. Area Officers Die In Air Crash

Lieut. Lawrence G. McGinnis of 2245 N. Wakefield st., Arlington, Va., and Lieut. John H. Moffett of 8 Franklin st., Kensington, Md., were two of 24 men killed Wednesday in the collision and crash of two Army bombers on the shores of Great Salt Lake, Utah.

McGINNIS

Mrs. F. A. Tutt, mother of Lieut. McGinnis, and Mrs. Herbert T. Edwards, mother of Lieut. Moffett, were notified yesterday by the commanding officer of Wendover Field, Utah.

The men had been reported missing when the planes failed to arrive at Pocatello, Idaho, during a night flight from Wendover Field. Wreckage of the planes was found Sunday.



MOFFETT

Lieutenant McGinnis, only son of Mrs. Tutt, was completing his last flight before being granted a 10-day leave. A native of Eureka, Kans., the 30-year-old navigator attended the University of Kansas and was a student at George Washington University in 1941.

Enlisting as an aviation cadet in March, 1942, he was trained at Maxwell Field, Ala., and received his wings at Coral Gables, Fla., the following December. He was stationed in Trinidad on the antisubmarine patrol prior to being transferred to Wendover Field for high range bomber training.

Nineteen-year-old Lieutenant Moffett, a bombardier, received his wings July 15 at San Angelo, Tex., and had been stationed since at Wendover Field, part of the time as instructor.

His bride-to-be, Patricia Bruen of Chicago, was told of the tragedy on her arrival at Wendover Field for the ceremony, according to the Associated Press.

His mother is the former India Moffett, one time society editor of the Chicago Tribune. His father is Capt. Fletcher Moffett of the Army Air Corps. He is stationed in England. Besides his parents he is survived by a sister, Miss India Moffett.

Rep. Cannon Quotes Official Who Sees Nation Endangered

Hitler has at least one special squadron of bombers in reserve ready to dump a heavy load on some United States city, according to a highly placed United States official quoted here yesterday by Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee.

The United States has never been in so great danger of an air raid as at present, this official maintains, according to Cannon.

Every victory won over Germany increases the possibility of a raid, this source held, and the vigilance of the Army and the Office of Civilian Defense should not be relaxed.

Cannon said the official he quoted was not connected with OCD and was "certainly in a position to know what he was talking about." The Appropriations Committee chairman declared, however, that he personally could not bring himself to see the situation in the same light, and did not subscribe to the opinion.

Would Stiffen Peace Terms

Cannon said such a raid over a U. S. city would only stiffen the peace terms imposed upon Germany and would accomplish no purpose useful to Germany.

He said the official explained his belief that Hitler would make a last desperate attempt to strike at the heart of the United States by referring to a cornered rat.

Cannon's discussion was in response to a query as to what the Appropriations Committee was likely to do if and when any further appropriation is sought for OCD. Last year Congress severely trimmed the wings of the agency on its War Service branch—social and community services.

Budget Bureau Trimming

The Budget Bureau meanwhile has moved in to trim down OCD's protective services, and the agency appears to be on the way out. Although OCD officials have expressed some hope of clinging to some of their War Services functions, there is little sympathy for that phase on Capitol Hill.

The Appropriations chairman made it clear that he would go along with any move made by the Budget Bureau to trim the protective services despite official warning of possible air raids.

Armed Services Take 47 Men From District

Forty-seven Washington men will report tmorrow for duty with the armed services, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Twenty-one men, inducted December 15, will go to the Army. They are:

Army Transfer Plan Affects Thousands at Nearby Camps

War Department plans to transfer to more active duty thousands of soldiers now in clerical and other noncombatant posts will apply to men at Fort George G. Meade, Md., Camp Lee, Va., and other Army personnel on headquarters staffs throughout the Third Service Command, it was announced yesterday.

At a conference of high-ranking Third Service Command officers yesterday in Baltimore, Brig. Gen. Philip H. Hayes, commanding general, explained that the transfer is in line with a recent order from Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces. The Third Service Command embraces Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

"It has always been War Department policy to employ civilians wherever possible," General Hayes explained. "Today's plans are merely an intensification of that program. But the current order is designed to be the most far-reaching of all and we are to make absolutely certain that no soldier fit for more active work is kept at an office job or relatively light work in camp."

The program will entail a thorough survey of the work and capabilities of the personnel involved in every department of Army administration throughout the command, General Hayes said.

Among factors to be considered are the physical qualifications of the soldier, the fullest use of any occupational skill he possesses, and the availability of civilian labor to perform his job.

"The program also involves elimination of departments not directly contributing to the war effort and the transfer of officers," he said. "However, it is not a blanket order and does not mean that uniforms will entirely disappear from headquarters and other installations. It has been the policy to use in service functions civilians, WACS, men over the prime combat age, and men with physical defects."

Lynchings, 1943

One hopeful note on life in the United States is the report from Tuskegee Institute showing a decided drop in lynchings in 1943. Only three persons were murdered by mobs last year, compared with five in 1942, four in 1941 and five in 1940. That is a notable improvement. It is a national disgrace, of course, that any accused citizen was put to death without the benefit of a trial. Every thoughtful citizen must blush with shame for this vestige of barbarism at a time when we are engaged in a world war for democracy and decency. Yet the record of last year indicates that some States are making encouraging progress in clearing their records of this blot.

On the face of the current report special congratulations are due to Mississippi, which has often in the past been foremost among the States in which lynchings occur. In 1942 Mississippi had three lynchings in a week. In 1943 its slate remained clean. For that matter none of the States which permitted mob murders within their borders in 1942 is on the black list just issued. The offending States in 1943 were Florida, Georgia and Illinois. One might draw from this fact the hopeful deduction that the scorn heaped upon the lynching States last year spurred their law-enforcement officials to greater vigilance in protecting the rights of citizens to a fair trial.

There is, however, no ground for complacency in this report, particularly in view of the fact that it does not touch the slaying of innocent people in race riots. Detroit's orgy of last summer cost the lives of more people than have been lynched in the South in several years. This and other outbreaks of racial feeling and the lynching in Illinois very strongly indicate that the problem of assuring protection to minorities is moving northward. There is not much choice between mobs called lynchers and other mobs called rioters. And if any distinction is to be drawn between the sheriff who opens a jail to mobsters at pistol point and police squads who recklessly shoot down Negroes in the midst of general excitement, the latter seem to be the most culpable. In spite of the improved record on lynchings, many of our States in both the South and the North are still a long way from handling the racial problem intelligently.

F. Walker, Esq.

We had assumed that the Postoffice Department hearings on the morality of the magazine Esquire were intended as an enlivening divertisement for these troubled times. But, inexplicably, the Postmaster General has taken them seriously. Overruling the board of postal inspectors which had heard and seen the highly entertaining "evidence," Mr. Walker has ordered revocation of the magazine's second-class mailing privileges on the technicality that it is not "published for the dissemination of information of a public character or devoted to literature, the sciences, arts or some special industry."

What Mr. Walker means by this, as his statement on the subject reveals, is that Esquire offends his personal sense of propriety. He acknowledges that it is not technically "obscene," yet he regards some of its writings and pictures as "indecent, vulgar, risque." Since he feels this way about it, the Postmaster General would be well-advised to refrain from subscribing to the publication on his own account. But he is exceedingly ill-advised, we think—however solid his legalistic basis for doing so—to deny it the customary means of reaching others who may have a loftier opinion of its qualities.

If some of the material in Esquire is in dubious taste, a good deal of it also possesses real literary and artistic merit. Among its regular contributors are outstanding contemporary writers and artists. When one surveys some of the downright drivel and pornography which the postal system of this country helps to circulate, it is hard to escape the conclusion that the ruling against this particular magazine stems more from personal prejudice than from a conscientious adherence to the postal regulations. It was this consideration, no doubt, which impelled the Rev. Daniel A. Poling, editor of The Christian Herald, to denounce from his Baptist pulpit the Postoffice decision as "dangerous" and with "absolutely no justification in the Bill of Rights."

Regulations governing the use of the mails are, of course, necessary. But it is no less necessary to interpret them with the utmost care and liberality. Otherwise we shall find ourselves subject to bureaucratic censorship—which means censorship in accordance with the canons of good taste of individual bureaucrats. In the end this is more likely to vitiate public morals than any amount of obscenity left to the discernment of the public to discard. The danger lies in the inescapable tendency of censors to eliminate the meritorious with the evil. Respecting some of them at least, one may paraphrase an old adage: To the prurient, all things are prurient.

Fire Insurance

The major fire insurance stock companies of the United States are trying to take out an insurance policy against the Supreme Court. They were indicted by the Department of Justice for violating the Federal antitrust laws. It is the contention of their spokesmen, who are both numerous and vocal, that the antitrust laws never at any time applied to the insurance industry, never were intended to apply to it, on the ground that insurance is not commerce. A district court of the United States upheld this view. But the Department of Justice appealed its case to the Supreme Court, which will probably render a decision in the matter very soon.

Despite all their vehement insistence that they do not come within the purview of the antitrust laws, the fire insurance companies did not care to run any risks with the Supreme Court. So they introduced in Congress a wonderfully simple piece of legislation. It seems worth quoting here in full as a model for all groups or industries which might like to avoid the sometimes irksome and restrictive provisions of the Sherman and Clayton Acts:

Be it enacted, etc., "That nothing contained in the act of July 2, 1890, as amended, known as the Sherman Act, or the act of October 15, 1914, as amended, known as the Clayton Act, shall be construed to apply to the business of insurance or to acts in the conduct of that business or in anywise to impair the regulation of that business by the several States."

Simple, isn't it? Why, it would save the Supreme Court all the trouble of figuring out for itself the scope of the Sherman and Clayton acts. Even in a season when special pleading before Congress appears to be the vogue, this insurance bill ranks, by a wide margin, as the most extraordinary example of group advantage ever presented to a legislature. Representative Charles M. La-Follette of Indiana characterized the bill very well, we think, when he said: "This legislation is simply the unconscionable and immoral attempt to interfere with orderly judicial procedure, to strike at the very roots of the existence of an untrammeled and unfettered judicial system by legislative enactment, which is equally as subject to public censure as the attempt made in 1937 to do the same thing by executive interference."

As is so often the case in issues of this sort, the pleaders for immunity from Federal law are piously chanting that they are defenders of States' rights. Perhaps this is a shrewd tactic in a Congress ridden by sectionalism. But it is also arrant nonsense. The fire insurance companies will remain just as subject to State regulation as they are now if they are found to fall within the scope of the Sherman and Clayton Acts. They will simply be compelled to cease conspiring with one another across State lines for the purpose of restraining trade. Even if the Federal Government undertook to regulate the insurance industry, which is not now proposed, State laws regarding them would not be abrogated. The Federal Government regulates railroads and banks; yet both are subject at the same time to State governance. It entails no diminution of the rights of the States to afford them Federal assistance in safeguarding the general welfare.

Rip Van Winkle

It is a pleasure to note a sign of life at the Foreign Economic Administration, which on January 1 we found in danger of atrophy. Mr. Crowley, FEA's head, a day later announced that the FEA was taking over the job of importing foodstuffs which has hitherto been done by the procurement branch of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the War Food Administration. The shift was ordered way back on October 6. The date is pertinent because of the argument offered in defense of FEA's lethargy that time is needed for this amalgamated and immensely significant agency to jell. There has been plenty of time for FEA to jell, but the trouble is that FEA seems to have mistaken destruction for reconstruction, as the list of resignations seems to suggest. More than 250 resignations have occurred to date in more or less key positions.

The newspaper PM adds to our criticism of FEA the statement that procurement and stockpiling of essential materials is again wholly controlled by Mr. Jesse Jones and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The more it changes, the more it remains the same thing. Procurement and stockpiling of essential materials used to be done by the Board of Economic Warfare before BEW became absorbed in FEA. When the President removed Mr. Wallace and Mr. Milo Perkins from the Board of Economic Warfare, he was supposed to have coupled his head-lopping with the righting of the grievance of which they complained, namely, that the final authority on procurement should be taken away from the nonoperating Mr. Jones. The President fortified this decision with an executive order. Dated September 25, the executive order specified that Mr. Crowley and the FEA should be responsible for procurement.

At the time we thought that Mr. Crowley and Mr. Jones were two faces of the same medal, but we did not think they were so blatant as not to keep up the appearance of obeying an executive order. However, there was a precedent at hand in the case of procurement at home. By executive order authority for this belongs to Mr. Nelson and the WPB, nevertheless, the War Department retained it, albeit with Mr. Nelson's tacit acquiescence. It has long been apparent that we can no longer study the processes of our Government through acts of Congress. Now we know that we cannot even get the hang of its through executive orders.

Gen. Arnold's Report

In his report to the Secretary of War, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, the commanding general of the Army Air Forces, tells a story of which he and every other American can well be proud. It is a story of American vision, daring, enterprise, ingenuity and intelligence, this story of the growth of our air power in size and effectiveness until today it constitutes one of the most powerful fighting forces the world has ever seen. At the beginning of this year, General Arnold reveals, the Army Air Forces numbered 2,385,000 officers and men, and they are still growing. Yet in 1938, a year before the war in Europe began, the personnel of the Army Air Forces totaled only 1300 officers and 18,000 men. We then ranked about seventh among the nations of the world in military aircraft.

Fortunately we did not rank seventh in "plans and ideas." When the emergency which air men had anticipated actually arose, General Arnold and his subordinates were ready for it. An expansion began that is without parallel in history, for while Germany took 10 years to create her Luftwaffe, "we were required to build our air force in one, and to fight with it in the four corners of the world at the same time."

How well this job was done by American industry, by the War Department, by General Arnold himself, and by the band of fliers and technicians he had surrounded himself with, this report makes clear. As of October 31, 1943, the Army Air Force personnel have flown over a quarter of a million combat sorties, expended in combat more than 40 million rounds of ammunition, used up nearly two billion gallons of gasoline, destroyed in aerial combat 8478 enemy airplanes, probably destroyed 2555 more, and damaged another 2834.

Besides, an increasing number of enemy factories, ships, airfields, ammunition depots and gasoline dumps have felt the impact of our air power.

But to make these victories possible, a fantastically complicated job of organization and training had to be done. The report goes into some detail about these preparations. It will be read with justified pride by the American people and our Allies. It is to no small extent because of this remarkable effort that General Arnold can say with truth that "Two years after Pearl Harbor, it is now plain that for us the beginning has ended; for our enemies, the end has begun."

Teaming Up

It has long been evident that before we can win victory and reap the fruits of victory, we must be prepared to throw all that we have and are into the struggle. But that suggestion, alas, seldom comes from members of Congress. Senator Capper is an exception. In a radio speech Sunday which will doubtless be taken to heart in the Middle West, where his voice is so well known, he said flatly that the winning of this war is going to take all the resources of the United States, "even beyond what ordinarily we would regard as the limit of endurance."

Doubtless the senior Senator from Kansas was replying to some of his colleagues who have recently been using a slide rule with which to measure our proper contribution to the task of licking Hitler. He used to see eye to eye with them on the problems of our foreign policy. That he has parted company with men who—shall we say?—can be so picayunish is a tribute to his sense of decency. He probably knows something about the proportions of American and British troops already engaged. When we invaded North Africa, 80 per cent of the troops were British; the same ratio applied to the invasion of Italy at Salerno. At present half of General Mark Clark's army is British, and the whole of General Montgomery's. In North Africa there are more British than American soldiers. Nothing has been said about these percentages hitherto because under General Eisenhower the armies have been welded into one team. Let us, for victory's sake, remain a team.

SPOIL OF AVALON

Last trump!—and up from this strewn sward will wing
The armored man and skin-clad, brawny serf,
Court ladies whose spice-scented garments cling
And flow again as fell sound splits the turf;
Roman in jingling brass, dark men with woad
Smearing their hairy nakedness; the sain
Of Innisfail; Joseph who toiled the road
From Palestine, his hands still without taint,
Throwing no shadow since within the tomb
He laid the Christ; and Arthur whose pure heart
Beats high once more; and boys, who, wreaking doom
Of German hate, like archangels depart.
But till last trump, theirs is a calm profound.
Rich jewels scattered through the shimmering ground!

Failure Of A Law

THE ARMY'S wrath over the continuation of strikes on the eve of its great thrust at the front door of Hitler's European fortress must be laid at the door of Congress. That is a disturbing thought in a campaign year, but there doesn't seem to be any rational escape from the enactment of stiffer legislation to stop this sort of counteroffensives on the home front.

It is now clear beyond doubt that the Connally-Smith Act is not an effective weapon against strikes. That seems to be due to its own inadequacies as well as to lax enforcement. It requires 30 days of notice before a strike that would interrupt war work may be instigated. But the Associated Press found, from a check of governmental records, that only 15 strikes out of about 500 were called after compliance with the act in the first three months it was in effect.

THAT IS a shameful record of law violation. Congress appears to be largely responsible, for it created a legal obligation without providing any effective means of enforcing it. All the Government can do under this act when wartime strikes take place without notice is to sue for damages. Often it would be difficult to prove specific monetary damages resulting from a walkout. The damage, according to high military authority, more frequently shows up in terms of American soldiers needlessly slaughtered. In any event, the Administration has made no effort, so far as I can determine, to sue strikers who defy their Government in wartime.

There are criminal penalties in the Connally-Smith Act for anyone who interferes with the operation of a war plant in the hands of the Government. Thirty officials of coal miners' unions were convicted at Pittsburgh under this section, but they escaped with only suspended sentences. Some other charges growing out of the coal strikes are under investigation. But John L. Lewis, chief instigator of the miners' defiance, remains unscathed. So the antistrike law, as mildly and sparsely applied by the Administration, must be regarded as a fizzle.

The Connally-Smith Act would have been a valuable weapon against strike sabotage if the President had been willing to use it as such. With it, he could have stood firm and broken the coal strike, thus discouraging any other coercive threats. Instead, he has made a practice of yielding to a show of force. The blunt truth is that so long as he continues to give way to pressure that is closely linked with his own political fortunes, it will be extremely difficult for Congress to pass any legislation that will end this letdown on the home front.

YET Congress must face the situation and do the best it can. For this general retreat of the Government in the face of domestic threats to the war program is gravely dividing the Nation as we approach our most severe test in battle. It is cutting deeply into the morale of our troops. It is clouding the future of organized labor. It is giving the general public the idea that sacrifice for the national welfare is ignored while disloyal threats and coercion are rewarded.

If members of Congress have heard from their constituents while home for the holidays, the sentiment for enactment of a new wartime labor policy is likely to be strong when they reassemble. President Roosevelt is said to be preparing to counter with a plea for unity. But unity cannot be built on a foundation of confusion and defeatism in time of war. The only real hope of stiffening up the home front for the coming offensive seems to lie in cooperation to restore, and not to forget about, civilian disciplines.

Miser's Thanks

Allow me to comment upon the news story regarding the Washington bellhop who returned $2800 to its owner, who offered a reward of two nickels. I notice that the hotel is named, the bellhop is named, the New Guinea Club is named, but the owner of the $2800 remains significantly anonymous. Why?

Is it simply a case of careless reporting, in which one of the most important elements of the story was omitted, or was it done intentionally, in order to protect someone? The latter seems improbable, since it is extremely unlikely that the character in question requires outside protection!

In short, the press muffed a golden opportunity to foster the cause of honesty, by neglecting to print in bold letters the name of the magnanimous gentleman who proffered the amazing reward of two nickels, that all who know him might commend him for his generous expression of gratitude!

Honesty is a quality which seems to be getting rarer, as the years go by, and should be encouraged; not discouraged. Our miser friend's action, and its attendant publicity (minus his name) has undoubtedly influenced, adversely, the future conduct of many otherwise honest persons.

W. LEHMAN.

Dr. New Deal

The President was wrong. Old Dr. New Deal was a quack, who merely had the patient liquored up for ten years. The people have now found this out, as witness the last election returns.

Funnel Journalism

On The Abuses Of Anonymity

IT IS A TIME-HONORED principle in American jurisprudence that a man accused of a crime must be confronted by his accusers. As the Bill of Rights puts it:

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial . . . to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

Now these witnesses must, under the law, be specific individuals—John Doe, Richard Roe, Joe Doakes or whatever their names may be—and not anonymous entities such as "high-placed officials," "unimpeachable sources," or "authoritative quarters."

The officials may be high, the sources may be unimpeachable, the quarters may be authoritative. But they have no standing in a court of law unless they emerge from behind the arras, speak with their own voices and make the charges in their own proper persons.

THIS IS A GOOD rule for American newspapers, as courts of public opinion, to follow, a rule which for years they did follow but which, from time to time during recent months, they have, to their shame, honored only in the breach.

Thus some time ago the American people were regaled with violent personal attacks on Gen. Charles de Gaulle by certain unnamed officials who vented their spleen against the French leader by using compliant newspapermen and newspapers as their funnel.

And now we have the spectacle of charges practically tantamount to treason being made against a large body of our fellow citizens —the steel and railroad workers —by those unwilling to make these charges in person.

"THE FLAT STATEMENT was made in high quarters here yesterday," said one report, "that American railway and steel strike threats may have cost the Allies all hope of an eruption in Germany and occupied contries that could have brought Germany's collapse before spring."

"This means," the report went on to say, "that the war could be extended months longer and that the Allies still may have to fight through the summer at a cost of scores of thousands of casualties before Germany can be brought to her knees."

Now this writer holds no brief for the steel workers or the railroad operatives or any other group that strikes or threatens to strike in wartime. He holds, on the contrary, that all such strikes are reprehensible.

At the same time it is difficult to see what good purpose was served by the serious charges made by the unidentified high quarters. The effect may be the contrary of that intended. Instead of bringing about that closing of the ranks which is so desperately needed it has only produced bitterness, dissension and disunity.

BUT THERE is more to the question than that. By implication the "high quarters" cited in the quotation given above suggest that had there not been a threat of a steel strike and a railroad strike, the latter forcing the Government to take over the railroads, Germany would have collapsed by spring.

Have the American people ever been told anything of the kind by any "high quarters" in the past?

The answer is that they were not. They were told instead, and again and again during the summer and fall of 1943, that victory was far off, that Germany was still tremendously powerful, indeed stronger than she was at the outbreak of war; above all, that we must under no circumstances expect an internal collapse of the Reich until after her armies had been crushed.

IT LOOKS as if the American people have been treated like children incapable of being told the facts of life.

When the going was hard we were confronted with a conspiracy of silence the purpose of which obviously was to hide the unpleasant facts from us. When the light of victory began to shine on us and our Allies, the gear was shifted into reverse. We began to be belabored with pessimistic utterances and torrents of gloom.

Nor does it add very much to public enlightenment to be told that the threat of strikes in the United States was alone enough to put iron in the wobbly legs of the Germans and their satellites. If that is true the legs couldn't have been so wobbly.

As a matter of fact in Hitler's New Year proclamation, a document of some 8000 words, there is no reference to America's internal weaknesses. If that subject had any propaganda value it is strange that the Fuehrer ignored it.

It is about time the American people were treated as adults and entrusted with the facts, pleasant as well as unpleasant, bad as well as good. It is about time that those high officials who have anything to say stand up to be seen and heard. And it is about time that newspapers stop serving as the funnels of anonymous outpourings from no matter what high places or illustrious sources.

USO In Italy

Last night the Ella Logan show braved the rain and mud to put on the finest theatrical performance this reporter has seen in nine months overseas.

The location was a battered and war-torn theater, filled to capacity with Allied troops, and the applause which followed each act was so enthusiastic that the men had to be warned not to cause too great a vibration as it was not certain just how secure the remainder of the roof was.

The USO group consisted of only three people which further proves the age-old axiom that all good things come in small packages. Ella sang the kind of songs soldiers like to hear and her snappy repertoire kept them on the edge of their seats during her entire performance. Her partner in dancing grace and feminine charm was Edith Delaney, who hails from Richmond Hill, L. I. and the music was furnished by Jerry Shelton, formerly with the Bing Crosby show. Jerry is a whiz on the accordion and his jokes were really fine.

Before coming to Italy the Ella Logan show toured Africa and while in Algiers, Edith Delaney visited the grave of her late husband, Sergt. Jack Feinstein, who was killed in action during the battle for the now famous "Hill 609." He was buried in Ksar Mesour Cemetery.

During an interview Miss Logan stated, "I wish the folks back home could see the spirit of the boys over here. No one has ever complained to me about anything. I think it's wonderful. There was one night in Italy that I will never forget," she continued, "and that was the night we were putting on our show just a couple of miles behind the front lines while the Allies were sending up the heaviest artillery barrage of this campaign. That was certainly an exciting night for me."

From here the group is going to Sicily, Africa and then up to Great Britain.

We all thank them for a most enjoyable evening and wish them "bon voyage."

Private Builders

Congratulations on the stories dealing with the attempts of private real estate men and builders to discredit and kill public housing. The activities of this group are so obviously selfish and contrary to the public welfare that it defeats its own purpose and serves only to discredit itself. Private builders have failed miserably in the past to build housing for low-income tenants. Do these builders propose that these tenants continue to live in their hovels, which are so prevalent in Washington, because it is unprofitable to build housing for them and because they object to public housing to be built for them? The private builders would have a much stronger argument against public housing if they could show by deeds that they can do what public housing has done. Thus far these deeds have not been forthcoming.

If there is "a sordid story" to tell, it is the story of profiteering which the real estate owners are engaged in because of the tight housing situation. I am referring, for instance, to the refusal of the owners to decorate apartments which ordinarily were redecorated at least every two years. They take the attitude that no matter how filthy an apartment may be there will be no trouble in renting it, so why spend money keeping it clean and in proper condition.

Most Urgent Task

Our most urgent task is unity for the continued production of the materials of war. We have to give up the pre-Pearl Harbor luxuries of using the production of the materials of war to get rich, of stopping production, no matter how valid the grievance might be, by way of slow downs, stoppages or strikes, of discrimination of any race because of the color of its skin, and of intolerance and bigotry because of difference of religious worship.

And we must ask Congress to give up its pre-Pearl Harbor luxury of sectional and special interests to devote all its energies to such legislation as will promote the greater unity in winning the war and peace. And last, we must remind those who are berating the people on the home front that almost every family has some loved one in the armed services of his country, and the ire of those individuals could be directed with more justice to those who have failed to give leadership and direction to the tasks of the individual people on the home front.

Wanted: A General

By Paul Winkler

Italian Guerillas

"THE GUERILLEROS want a commander."

In those words, Riccardo Luzzato, Italian anti-Fascist writer who heads the Italian section of the British Broadcasting Corporation, put his finger on the chief need of guerilla forces in northern Italy, which are operating against the Germans bravely but, only too often, ineffectively, because of the absence of unified command.

A diplomat returning from Italy to Switzerland told the Gazette de Lausanne recently that "Italy, as a result of the lesson she has learned in three years of the sufferings of war, has begun to organize guerilla actions in a grand style, in consonance with the character of the country and of its traditions."

But many of the local uprisings which these groups have attemped have been beaten down because no centralized military command lay behind them, and each attack was therefore an isolated operation against an enemy not laboring under the necessity of treating each skirmish as a separate entity.

Three Main Sources

The strength of the Italian guerilla units has been constituted from three main sources:

1. Italian troops which, after having participated in the occupation of France, refused either to lay down their arms or join the Mussolini "government" of northern Italy. Most of these units were in Savoy. Their commanders had considerable sums of money in their regimental treasuries, and have used it to facilitate the formation and operation of the guerilla forces. In addition, improvised rural "banks" have been formed to help finance small guerilla units. In one cache of this kind the Germans recently seized 150,000 Italian lire.

2. Young men who refused to obey the German call for a labor draft, fleeing into the mountains instead.

3. Known anti-Fascists, who were afraid the Germans would take even sterner measures against them than the presurrender Mussolini government had ever envisaged.

In addition to the Italian fighters, the guerillas have welcomed to their ranks several hundred escaped British and American prisoners of war.

The German radio has claimed that no more than 9000 Italians are engaged in guerilla action, but this appears to be a serious underestimate. A group of 4000 men has been formed in Milan and Cremona alone, and is now operating near Lecco. For several days 5000 guerillas held Venice, with the aid of the population, but then retired to less exposed positions. These alone make 9000, and there are plenty of other groups, notably near Bergamasco and Trentino, while battles between German soldiers and Italian partisans have also been reported in the region of Lake Maggiore.

Underground Paper

The guerilla fighters have their own underground paper, Il Combattente (The Fighter). They also have allies in the cities, who perform works of internal sabotage—as in Milan, where the Germans arrested 145 persons recently for military sabotage. In their fight against the guerillas, the Nazis have decreed the execution of ten hostages for every German soldier killed by the partisans.

In seeking the proper leader for guerilla activity, Italians find themselves immediately faced with a significant fact: there is just one Italian military leader who has commanded an important formation of anti-Fascist Italian troops against Fascist armies. This focuses the choice definitely on this single man—Colonel Randolfo Pacciardi, who commanded the Italian troops on the republican side in the Spanish civil war, with immensely greater success than his opponents among his compatriots on the Fascist side. Colonel Pacciardi is today in New York.

Representatives of the guerilla groups in Switzerland recently sent a message to London through the noted anti-Fascist Ignazio Silone, who is seriously ill in that country, suggesting that Pacciardi be sent to northern Italy to take command of guerilla activities. It was realized in England that Pacciardi's name would serve as an inspiration to anti-Fascist Italians, and the British government was asked in Parliament why Pacciardi had not been sent to Italy. The answer was that since he is living in New York, the decision on that point must rest with the American Government.

Pacciardi himself has asked Washington several times for permission to return to Italy. He has made two alternative suggestions: first, that he be allowed to form in southern Italy an anti-Fascist brigade subject to the Allied command directly, rather than to Marshal Badoglio, feeling that anti-Fascist Italians will fight much more willingly for the United Nations direct than for the commander who, until recently, was the enemy of the Allies; second, that he be dropped by parachute at some point where he could contact the northern guerillas and join them. Recently Pacciardi was told that the United States Government would be willing to facilitate his return to Italy, but only after Rome has been liberated.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On Prolonging The War

IT WOULD have been better, no doubt, if the remarks about strikes prolonging the war had first been made directly to the labor leaders face to face rather than broadcast anonymously. I was present when the remarks were made, and I have no doubt myself that if the leaders had had a chance to hear not only the broad conclusion but had also been able to ask questions and have the matter thoroughly explained to them, they would see the point.

LIPPMANN

For it is evident from what the labor leaders have said in reply that they honestly do not understand how strikes and the threat of strikes may prolong the war. When they do understand it, they will not quibble over whether the effect has been to prolong the war six months, six weeks, or even six days.

WHILE THE speaker was making his remarks, I recalled an incident which after 25 years is still a terrible reminder of how tragic can be the effect of the thoughtlessness of a civilian upon the lives of soldiers. I was then an intelligence officer attached to Colonel House's mission in Paris which was arranging the armistice of 1918. The Germans were ready to surrender but there had to be formal agreement by the Allies before the terms could be submitted to the Germans. On the front tremendous battles were raging, and each day of battle was costing thousands of casualties. One of the principal delegates, not British or French, had to postpone his departure for Paris by 24 hours. I forget the exact reason if I ever knew it; whatever the reason, it had to do with domestic affairs in his country. As a result the armistice came one day later than it might have come.

Not long after the armistice my duties took me away from Paris to what had been the American sector of the Western Front. One day I stopped at an American cemetery out there, and on some 20 or 30 graves there were markers showing that the soldiers who were buried there had fallen on the very morning of the delayed armistice. That is what time costs in war, and that is why it is the sacred duty of every civilian to do nothing, however important or righteous he may feel about it, which does actually or could possibly distract, delay, overburden the leaders and commanders charged with the responsibility of pushing the war to its conclusion.

THE MAN who made the remarks on New Year's Eve knows more about the awful reality of war, and of this war, than any living American. Why is he so profoundly convinced that these evidences of division and confusion on the home front may have such a tragic effect?

To appreciate that we must realize the position of the enemy. Germany, as Hitler himself now admits, cannot win the war. The Allied armies are closing in upon her and upon her satellites, and they rule the air. What then is the position of a Bulgarian, Hungarian, Rumanian or German soldier or civilian who is not a member of the Nazi hierarchy or a condemned war criminal? He stands between two fires. If he continues to fight the war, he can look forward to the steady devastation of the cities from the air and a destructive invasion on the ground. If, on the other hand, he wishes to quit the war and to capitulate, he faces the tortures of the Nazi Gestapo.

THE QUESTION which haunts the peoples of the Axis countries is which of these two hideous alternatives they should take. We may be reasonably sure that this is the real question in their minds: Is it more dangerous to face the Allied bombardment and invasion of the next six or eight months or to face the firing squads and torture chambers of the Nazi Gestapo? The danger of the Gestapo is imminent, direct, personal; the danger from the Allied arms, though in the end it will be overwhelming, is still such that the individual might hope somehow to escape it and survive.

That is what keeps the Axis people going. Now at some moment in the coming months the Allied ground and air offensive will develop such furious power that the apparatus of Nazi domination—its communications and supplies—will be too disorganized to govern the European continent. When it is disorganized, the risks of revolt and surrender will become obviously less than the risks of the increasing bombardment and of the impending invasion.

THAT MOMENT can be advanced or postponed depending in some conceivable though incalculable degree on what the masses of the Axis armies and civilian functionaries believe is going to happen. Over them hangs the terror of the Gestapo, which is directed by desperate men who know that personally they are doomed. If backed by their terrorism, the Gestapo can make the masses believe,—and can make their potential leaders, who are not doomed, believe,—that by resisting through the summer of 1944 they can get a compromise peace, the incentive to resist will be great. By resisting they avoid the reprisals of the Gestapo and they might also avoid the consequences of absolute military defeat.

What could make the Axis peoples continue to believe that diehard resistance would bring a negotiated peace? Clearly, evidence of war-weariness in the Allied countries and of political confusion among them. If they believed, whether it was true or not, that this country was faced with great strikes, with a legislative revolt against the President, with an election which might alter the war policy of the United States, that belief would be a powerful incentive to hold on through 1944.

IF FOLLOWS that the American civilian population can probably shorten the war, can certainly prevent it from being unnecessarily prolonged, by taking decisive and spectacular measures to show that the prosecution of the war has precedence over every other consideration. No one can measure these things exactly. But no one, who knows the situation, can seriously deny the enormous benefit that would follow if labor renewed its pledges not to strike during the war, if Congress pulled itself together, and had the courage to pass a universal service act. Some such demonstration is called for, so that each of us at home may be able to say as Lincoln once said to John Hay: "For my own part I consider the central idea prevailing in this struggle is the necessity upon us of proving that popular government is not an absurdity."

Public Debt Rise Halts as Incomes Jump

The long-continuing, month-by-month rise in the public debt came to at least a temporary halt in December, as Federal income soared to a new record of $5,736,000,000.

However, war bond redemptions hit a new peak during the month, as war spending dropped to the lowest level since midsummer.

The Treasury daily statement for December 31, issued yesterday, placed the year-end debt at $170,108,000,000—an increase of $57,637,000,000 for the year, but a drop from the $170,318,000,000 total of a month earlier, and from a high of $170,420,000,000 attained December 11. It was the first time in more than three years that any month closed with a debt smaller than at the end of the preceding month.

The debt is due to resume its rise, however, when the 14-billion-dollar fourth war loan gets under way two weeks from today.

Carlson Urges Plan to End Tax Returns

By the Associated Press

A major legislative operation designed to make it unnecessary for millions of persons to file any Federal income tax returns at all was proposed yesterday by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas. Most income taxes would be deducted automatically from wages and salaries under his plan.

The Kansan, a member of the tax-initiating Ways and Means Committee and author of the Ruml pay-as-you-go bill, described present revenue statutes as "a hodgepodge of language that cannot be correctly and definitely interpreted by a Philadelphia lawyer."

Declaring simplification to be "the No. 1 tax job" for 1944, he inserted in the Congressional Record his own suggestions for remedy, as follows:

1. Simplify and improve current withholding provisions so as to eliminate the need for any returns to be filed by 30 million of the 40 million to 50 million taxpayers. "This could be done by adopting a graduated withholding from wages and salaries," he said, "and at the same time allowing a percentage of income exemption" in lieu of the present deductions for other taxes paid, interest and contributions to churches and charity.

2. Combine existing personal income tax laws into one base and rate. "Under existing law we have one base and varying rates for the regular income tax and a separate base and rate for the victory tax," he said.

3. Repeal earned income credit. "There is sound argument for retaining the earned income credit, but its retention greatly complicates our tax return and is of little actual benefit to the taxpayer."

No Bonus Edict For Services Issued by WLB

The War Labor Board yesterday made clear that it will not order an employer to pay bonuses to workers entering the armed services.

By a unanimous vote, the board reversed a decision of its Chicago regional board granting employes of the New Indiana Chair Co., Jasper, Ind., a bonus of a week's pay when entering the armed forces.

A board official explained that the board has established as its policy that the payment or nonpayment of such bonuses is a "management prerogative" which cannot be directed by the board.

Approximately 100 workers at the plant are represented by the CIO United Furniture Workers of America. The company appealed the regional board decision.

Instead, the national board substituted a clause specifying that employes who are drafted or volunteer for military service are to receive any vacation pay that is due, and shall have the period of military service credited to their seniority records, provided they are honorably discharged and seek employment with the company within 40 days after discharge.

WLB officials have noted an increasing demand from unions for such benefits as military severance pay since other avenues toward higher wages have been closed.

Stocks Soften Moderately in Light Trading

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The stock market stepped into 1944 today with a slight limp.

While a little reinvestment demand lapped over from the old year, commitments were lightened here and there to await signs of a possible correction of the recent upswing, clarification of rail and steel wage disputes, the President's message to Congress next week and possibly nearby important war developments.

Lack of any urgent liquidation, however, was consoling to bullish forces who recalled that Januarys of past years have been months of ups and down with the former holding a shade the best of the argument.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was off .01 of a point at 49.5. Real breadth was absent, only 780 issues appearing on the ticker tape against 396 in the previous full session. Of these 312 were down, 262 up and 206 unchanged. Volume of 516,960 shares compared with 989,590 Friday and 620,000 in the initial five-hour stretch of 1943.

American Distilling "plain and stamped" lost 1¼ each and J. C. Penney, 2. Lesser casualties included U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Southern Pacific, N. Y. Central, Western Union "A," Goodyear, Oliver Farm, Boeing, Westinghouse, General Electric, duPont and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Bonds were as spotty as stocks. At Chicago, hogs fell 15 to 40 cents a hundredweight as Midwest yards reported the largest receipts of porkers in 19 years. Wheat was off ¼ of a cent a bushel to up ⅜. Cotton was unchanged to ahead 25 cents a bale.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—Rye closed fractionally higher today, a late rally canceling earlier losses, but all other grains showed little change from last Friday's finish. The undertone was weak much of the session, although liquidation failed to develop in any volume and toward the close the market crept upward from the day's lows.

There was some selling in wheat on disappointment over the failure of the Government to announce hard wheat ceilings. Many traders had expected such an announcement over the weekend and had bought the grain on the theory the ceilings would act as magnets and attract prices upward. Mills were buyers of the bread cereal futures.

At the close wheat was ¼ lower to ⅜ higher, May 1.69½; oats were ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, May 78¼; rye was ⅜ to ⅝ higher, May 1.27¾@1.27⅞, and barley was unchanged to ¼ lower, May 1.22¾.

Producer John Golden On Theater 'Luxury' Tax

By Marjorie Kelly.

On John Golden's blue letter paper comes a note bringing New Year's greetings, along with a carbon copy of another note which he has sent to Senator Robert F. Wagner.

The letter to the Senator speaks for itself:

"I hope I may enlist your interest in doing what you can to keep the theater tax at 10 per cent.

"This tax comes only out of the pockets of the people who need relaxation from the worry and stress of these days. President Roosevelt himself said 'Entertainment is a national asset; invaluable in peace, indispensable in war.'

"So far as the people of the theater are concerned the records show that they represent the only trade, industry or profession that gives away the only thing it has to sell.

"The American Theater Wing is entertaining and feeding hundreds of thousands of soldiers and sailors monthly. A songwriter named Irving Berlin will, by the time it's all counted, have given to Army Emergency Relief probably 10 million dollars.

"However, I didn't intend to begin a list of the theater's patriotic activities, though I do believe there isn't much harm in asking you to bring them to the attention of some of those people down there in Washington.

"The theater is the one institution of American life which the Nation cannot afford to restrict or hamper in any way. It must be allowed to 'do business as usual;' indeed, it must do more business than usual for the good of the people, though not for the sole purpose of making more money than usual.

"When Woodrow Wilson was quite ill, Carey Grayson said to me and Bernie Baruch, I have taken away all the President's medicine and prescribed theater.'

Theater Abroad

"Keeping the theater going is an essential war effort—a definite asset to the public welfare. In simple demonstration of this fact, look at the great cities abroad that lie in the path of the war's devastation. In the center of the most violent assaults their playhouses have kept open and audiences have turned to them to show their contempt of the enemy, thus allaying fear, preventing panic, stimulating courage.

"Almost from the first aerial attacks on London their theaters have done 'business as usual.' Moscow, Leningrad, and other large Russian cities have continued their dramatic presentations. In Moscow the Nazi guns were pounding away less than 40 miles distant, but bombs, opera and plays were in action simultaneously, the latter scornful of the competition.

"Again to quote the President, 'The theater is one of the real cultural factors of our American way of life. There has never been a time when the stage was called upon to play a greater part in maintaining public morale and fostering the patriotic spirit. This it is doing splendidly and I have full confidence that this support will continue until the war between the ideals of democracy and the destructive efforts of the Axis enemies is won. A free theater in a free world is one of the objectives for which we shall continue to fight.'

"How, then, can the theater be subjected to further 'luxury taxes' as if it were in the same class with jewelry and cosmetics? Rather should the theater be on the receiving end of governmental money, as are universities, libraries, and other instruments, of culture. I'm not advocating that now, of course, but I mention it as a counterweight to the idea of doubling or tripling at present excise tax.

"And so I beg your advocacy of a sane, reasonable tax—the present 10 per cent excise—on the people who need the recreation that the theater can and does provide. Let's not keep them away from this recreation, this relaxation from tension. Instead let's keep them Scrappy and Happy. Grinning and Winning. Sincerely,

"JOHN GOLDEN."

There's little to add to John Golden's arguments, except that to note that the producer of "Claudia," "Skylark," "Susan and God," "Three's a Family," and a long list of other successes, is chairman of the Theater Department of the Mayor's Defense Committee in New York, which has given away over 5,500,000 free theater tickets to servicemen. Theater managers here in Washington have given away tens of thousands of tickets through the hut in Post Square and through the State Door Canteen and USO.

It might be worth mentioning, too, that the movie theaters of the Nation rolled up $1,909,889,196 in bond sales during the Third War Loan, and that their quota for the Fourth War Loan campaign is $5,500,000,000. And that the screen supplements newspaper and radio work announcements of war messages in a unique way that is invaluable to a section of their patronage who might not come if prices were higher.

It would seem the theater does its part!

News from the Cross Roads Concert Bureau is that tonight the first of this season's concert series will be presented, with Paul Draper, tap dance, and Larry Adler, harmonica virtuoso. Subsequent presentations will be the General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus on Monday, January 21, and Barrington Sharma, baritone, on Thursday, March 2. The series is given at the George Washington High School, Alexandria, Va.

In 'Jackpot'

ALLAN JONES AND BETTY GARRETT
are prominently cast in Vinton Freedley's new musical comedy, "Jackpot" which opened at the National Theater last night

Vinton Freedley Hits the Jackpot

As gay, witty and tuneful a musical comedy as Washington has seen in many months breezed into the National Theater last night. "Jackpot," the new Vinton Freedley show, is one that can't miss.

The songs are clever, their music is catchy, the girls are beautiful, the gags are audaciously sophisticated, the plot is fast-moving and funny, and the specialty numbers are woven in neatly, the the sets are elaborate and frequently lovely.

That sums it up, but as to particulars:

The book by Guy Bolton, Sidney Sheldon and Ben Roberts provides an abundance of hilariously risque situations and sparkling dialogue. Howard Dietz's and Vernon Duke's songs include two that patrons will certainly be humming on the way home, "Sugar Foot" and "What Happened." And the blithely wicked lines of "A Piece of A Girl" and the gestures with which Allan Jones, Jerry Lester and Benny Baker sing it kept last night's audience whooping.

Probably the funniest thing in the show is Charles Weidman's ballet "Grist for De Mille" a satire on Agnes De Mille's choreography for "Oklahoma!" Mary Wickes warbles the lyrics that go with this —something about "Now that ballet's come to Schubert's Alley" and finally arms herself with a broom and sweeps the whole sound and fury of the pseudo-classic antics offstage.

Allan Jones is an irreproachable choice for the star of this light-hearted production. He looks extremely handsome in his Marine uniforms—and his romantic voice has a satisfactory lot of melodic ballads to show off with. And no less happy choices are Jerry Lester and Benny Baker as Jones' bosom pals and companions in iniquity. Irrepressible Jerry Lester in his first Broadway musical is as fresh and zestful as if he were ad-libbing all his lines. Baker with his big round baby face is an appealing comedian.

Betty Garrett, the Sergeant Maguire who provokes a series of racy exchanges when she is first heard from by telephone and a group of Marines interestedly watch Jerry Lester making love by phone to his "Top Sergeant" is a girl to watch. She looks very like Celeste Holm and mugs as delightfully. Her voice has an enchanting husky quality with a little break in it, and her energetic little person crackles with personality.

Nanette Fabray is lovely and sings well. As an actress she's outshone every moment Betty Garrett is on stage.

Among the specialty acts that must be mentioned are Don Liberto's dances with the songs "Sugar Foot" and "He's Good for Nothing But Me;" Eva Barcinska's accordion number as the second act opens, and Florence Lessing and Flower Hujer's solos in the ballet number.

Roy Hargrave's direction is briskly paced throughout. The costumes by Kiviette are unusual, utilizing combinations such as soft gray with yellow. There are a great many of them and all beautiful. Robert Edmond Jones and Raymond Sovey designed the sets, which are pretty and expertly contrived to facilitate the play's swift unfolding.

Altogether, a show that everybody concerned should be happy about. It should run a year.

Night Work

Writer John Wexley and actor Brian Donlevy worked nights to prepare and record the narration of "The City That Stopped Hitler—Heroic Stalingrad," which was filmed on the Russian battlefront and is being released by Paramount. Star and author traveled across town after a day's work at another studio to do the narration job at Paramount.

New Citizen

Viennese-born Carl Esmond took time out from portraying the leader of a Nazi fifth column conspiracy in Paramount's "Ministry of Fears" to be sworn in as an American citizen. Esmond came to America from Austria in 1938, shortly before the Anchluss by which Hitler absorbed the actor's native land into the Reich.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE QUESTION OF FOOD for Russia has caused many a dramatic scene in the offices of the Food Distribution Administration. Officials work in complete harmony, but not always in complete understanding.

One thing United States officials could not understand was why the Russians wanted lump sugar. A request came through from Moscow for 390,000 tons of sugar and United States officials began to figure where they could get it. It was quite a job, but finally they decided they could fill the order.

Then they ran into the odd angle that the Soviets wanted 80 per cent of the total to be lump or cube sugar.

"Oh, come now," said United States officials to Russian representatives in Washington. "We have found the British to be choosey now and then, with their requests for pork in certain loin cuts of certain weight, but this is worse than the British. Why lump sugar?"

The Russians said, "It is for the Red army."

"Yes, but isn't granulated sugar just as good?"

"It is a cable from Moscow," said the Russians, and that was that.

"We'll do what we can," said Food Distribution, and promptly sent a cable to the United States Embassy in Moscow, asking why the dickens the Russians soldiers needed lump sugar.

The explanation came back by return cable. The Russians, fighting in cold weather, warm themselves by drinking tea several times a day. They take it piping hot, and they have the habit of putting a lump of sugar between their teeth and sucking the tea through the sugar.

It's an old Russian custom, and United States officials concluded that, if lump sugar would make the Red army fight better, they should have it.

No Oleo for Russia

ANOTHER SUBJECT of debate was butter. Soviet food experts in Washington requested tremendous quantities of butter, at a time when U. S. supplies were tight. Food Distribution tried to persuade them that oleomargarine was just as good—with high caloric and nutritive values. Furthermore, it could be had for 17 cents a pound, as against 50 cents for butter—and the Russians are paying for their purchases.

The Russians put their heads together and exchanged a few words in Russian. Then they said, "We think Americans have a good sense of values!"

In other words, if butter cost three times as much as oleo, it was three times as good, and that was what they wanted. They got it. Shipments of butter to Russia in 1943 amounted to 85 million pounds (about 3 per cent of U. S. production).

Note: This is for the Red army. For Russian civilians, we supply lard, which they spread on black bread as if it were butter.

The Hopkins Dine Out

MR. AND MRS. HARRY HOPKINS have left the White House and are living in a home in Georgetown. One evening recently they decided to step out for dinner.

It was quite a come-down from the White House.

They went to Martin's, on the corner of Wisconsin ave. and N st., next door to a garage and across the street from an ice cream factory. All sorts of people eat there, from taxi drivers to Oswald Garrison Villard and occasionally Speaker Sam Rayburn.

When the Hopkinses walked in there was no booth available, so they stood around waiting. When they got space, they ordered a couple of drinks (whisky sours), and then a dinner at $1.20 each.

Hopkins opened with clam chowder, but Mrs. H. waited for the main course, which was lamb stew. She maintained a lively conversation most of the time, apparently trying to persuade Harry to her way of thinking on some matter. Harry didn't seem to be impressed.

Word of their presence was whispered from table to table, amid the whir of the ventilator, which tried valiantly to carry the fumes outdoors. One of the guests tugged at a waiter's apron strings and said, "Do you realize who you're waiting on?"

"Oh, yeah," said the waiter, with a shrug. "They've just moved into the neighborhood."

Just another customer.

War Surpluses

POLICY MAKERS of the War Production Board are still taking the position that there is nothing to spare for more than the bare minimum of civilian requirements. But when you talk to lower ranking officials of the industry level, you find them wringing their hands over the problems of surpluses.

This is not true of every branch, but it is general enough to indicate that America's tremendous production machine is now producing more than the war can consume.

Take the case of printing presses. The WPB branch handling printing presses is itching to tell the world that they actually see enough materials on hand to resume manufacture of presses for newspapers and for printers generally.

They cite the case of one group of press builders who, after conversion to war production, took a contract to build 1,800 navy gun mounts. This figure was based on an expected battle loss of 20 per cent. In other words, 1,800 gun mounts was 20 per cent or 360 more than the Navy needed.

But battle losses have been much less than 20 per cent. Thus the Navy begins to have a surplus of gun mounts, and is cutting down on orders. This leaves plant capacity for manufacturing printing presses.

Furthermore, officials see enough free steel, copper and zinc to supply the materials. There is no question about the demand, since newspaper and printing establishments all over the country are crying for replacements.

But one big handicap is manpower. For this and policy reasons, officials at the top are still sitting on the lid.

Merry-Go-Round

PHILADELPHIANS are speculating that, if Tom Dewey makes the White House, Joe Pew will be the Secretary of the Treasury. Joe is as honest as Andy Mellon, with exactly the same political philosophy . . . Joe Pew's editor of his Farm Journal, Wheeler McMillen, is taking his candidacy for President most seriously. Letters are being sent out all over the country on stationery marked "Wheeler McMillen for President," calling attention to the fact that headquarters have been established at 105 West Adams st., Chicago. "The time is ripe," says the letter, "for making Wheeler McMillen and his ideas fully known to the nation. May we hear from you?" . . . Paul Shoemaker, an old Associated Press man, signs the appeal.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 3.—The editorialists now are discussing the first, direct fourth term question which was addressed to the President at a White House press conference this week. They're comparing it in relation with the policy he pursued four years ago, when the third term question arose . . . As a matter of history, four years ago Roosevelt hadn't made up his mind about running for a third term. In fact, he signed a contract with Collier's in February, 1940, to become an associate editor in January, 1941, when he was to have left the White House. It was a three-year contract, at $75,000 a year plus $10,000 a year for normal tr veling expenses. The President agreed to write 26 articles a year for the magazine . . . Tom Beck, head of Crowell-Collier's, negotiated deal.

HENRY A. WALLACE

Henry Wallace's next big speech will be made in New York, at the Park Central on January 15. It will be about "Full Employment." . . . Eric Johnston, head of the Chamber of Commerce, will call his new book "America Unlimited." . . . Bill Lewis, vice president of CBS, may become executive vice president of the new Frequency-Modulation network in April.

At Teheran, during the conference, the Soviet officials prepared the design for a new stamp to commemorate the Anglo - American - Soviet pact which was about to be signed. The design was shown to some of the American representatives —who were worried about the initials which occupied the most prominent spot . . . "The initials might be misinterpreted in America," the Russians were told—for it might have become a case similar to that of AMGOT, which later was shortened to AMG because AMGOT was a naughty Turkish word. The Soviets re-designed the stamp, and philatelist FDR will receive the first copy.

A War Department official sat with Producer Max Gordon in the Stork Club, and they discussed the General Patton incident. "Max," the War Department official asked, "what would you do with Patton if you were his boss?" . . . Gordon, who looks upon all things only in their relation to the theater, replied: "Years ago, when Eva Tanguay was a vaudeville star, she toured the Albee circuit. Albee disliked her, personally, but as long as she was a hit he kept her working."

Maury Maverick and Paul Porter have turned their faces from Sidney Hillman's offer for their services at CIO . . . George Fielding Eliot will call his new book "Hour of Triumph." It positively will have no blueprint for peace . . . Joe E. Brown is puzzled at the unique honor accorded to him in Chungking. The screen star was named president of the American Club. But Chungking was only a short stopover for him . . . The Literary Guild's selections for April and May will be Vicki Baum's "Hotel Berlin, 1943," and Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge." Miss Baum's book will have some characters left over from her "Grand Hotel."

Johnny Kenley worked at the Shubert office as casting director for the chorus line. He knew how to pick the best of the boys and girls who applied for chorus jobs in musicals. Broadway knew him only as a nice, sweet boy . . . Came December 7, 1941. Johnny Kenley went directly to the Merchant Marine and said goodby to the chorus lines. He now is back for a short stay, with a thousand memories of adventures from Murmansk to the Cape. He's seen action on all the seas, and the showfolk of Broadway are proud of him . . . He wears a silver identification bracelet. On it is engraved just "Johnny."

The Soviet composers have invited Arturo Toscanini to visit their country after the war, and the maestro has accepted the invitation . . . Harnett Kane, whose book, "The Bayous of Louisiana," now is in its fifth printing, made a record lecture tour through the State. He delivered 200 speeches in ten weeks . . . Greta Garbo now walks up and down Madison ave. always carrying an apple in each hand . . . The town's newest comedy attraction is Ilse Bois, who introduced the song of the Three Carmens—Miranda, Amaya and Jones—in her American debut last night at Ruban Bleu.

David Ewen, the music expert, is at work on a juvenile biography of Johann Strauss—but doesn't know how to begin. "How do you write a biography for juveniles," he laments, "about a man whose parents were married in July, 1825, who was born in October of the same year?" . . . Iris Adrain, the screen actress, saw the new hit, "Voice of the Turtle" —and wept. This is the play which has a cast of 3—Elliott Nugent, Margaret Sullavan and Audrey Christie. "I'm crying because the play touched me," sobbed Miss Adrian. "I'm crying because I had a chance to play the Audrey Christie part and turned it down" . . . After all these years of saying No, Ginger Rogers finally has agreed to pose for cheesecake art of her "Lady In the Dark" exploitation.

With Shirley Povich

When America is done with the business at hand, the winning of the war, the country is sure-pop to have another major professional football league. Already, moneyed interests are discussing it in the knowledge that it can't miss, if given the proper backing and smart enterprise.

POVICH

The National Football League can be expected to battle any such movement to establish a rival big league with all the weapons it owns, exactly as baseball's National League fought to repress the American League in the latter's formative years. And for the same reasons, the new league will be a success because there is room for it.

Another major football league would have easier sailing than did baseball's American League which was in control of the parks and the good players. Football players and money are far more free than in 1901 when the upstart American League proclaimed itself a new big league and made it stick.

The new American League successfully challenged the old National League of baseball chiefly by the pirating of players, directed by Clark Griffith. A new football league would have no great player problem to contend with.

In every peacetime year, the Nation's colleges disgorge enough good football players to man two leagues. There is no shortage of football manpower in a normal season. Anther pro league would give the college stars a break, too. Under the National League rules they must sign with teams that draft them, at the salary terms offered, or be boycotted from big league football. Another league would break that monopoly.

Backed by big money, a new league would have no trouble inducing even the National League's stars to jump their clubs. If the National League wanted war, a new league could fight one, easily. It needs only the dough with which to tempt the better football players. The promoters could lay out big money in the knowledge they would get it back if they made a success of their league.

Another league would introduce competitive bidding for the college players which would be a healthy turn for the graduates who, unlike the college baseball players, are at the mercy of clubs claiming them. Outright bidding for campus stars by a new league would break up the soft touch now enjoyed by the National League. Peace with the new league might be the better tack.

As we were saying, there is room for a new major football league. Eastern and Western sections of five teams each could be easily assembled. In the East, Baltimore is fertile territory and could be one of the finest pro football towns in the Nation. Philadelphia, if given another good pro team would doubtless support it. In New York, Yankee Stadium houses no pro football. Washington is ripe for a second team, although the Redskins have a long option on Griffith Stadium. But the proper interests here might construct another stadium. Boston's Braves Field would doubtless be available.

In the West, Cincinnati is crying for big league pro football with Crosley Field offering a ready big league home for it. St. Louis' Sportsman's Park would house another team. Teams in New Orleans, playing perhaps in the big Sugar Bowl, and in Kansas City's fine baseball park, and in the Minneapolis ball park would do a tremendous business, we think.

A new league would be tapping, for the first time, the immense fotball interest of the South and Southwest if teams were established in such cities as New Orleans, Kansas City and St. Louis. The South and Southwest provides most of the talent, anyway, for the present pro league, and those same stars playing in their native settings would be a tremendous attraction.

It has been demonstrated that good pro football can beat down all the prejudices of the customers who have been weaned on college football. It was done in Chicago, and New York, and Washington, and lastly Philadelphia which was supposed to be completely a college football town. Minneapolis, we'll wager, would support both its famous Gophers on Saturday and a good pro team on Sunday.

And when peace descends over what is certain to be a war between the old and the new pro football leagues, you'd have, finally, a truly meaningful championship game between the pennant winners of the two leagues. A football World Series at last. And we think it will come to pass.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 3.—Some of the Naval Academy's best athletes have gone into the Navy's silent service—submarine work. They couldn't ask for or receive tougher duty.

The submarine boys regard publicity in the same light as they regard enemy depth charges. They want neither.

CONSIDINE

Naturally a deep secrecy enshrouds all of our ship movements, but the movements of our subs and personnel are doubly protected. The reasons are obvious. A sub working without the benefit of the surprise element on its side is a sub doomed to an early end. But it is permissible to state that two of the Navy's best athletes—Commander Wreford ("Moon") Chapple and Lieut. Comdr. Slade Cutter—are on active duty.

Chapple was one of the best all-around athletes the academy ever had. He starred in the '20's in football, boxing and track. Cutter was an All-America tackle for Navy on the team that beat the Army in the mud of Franklin Field, 3-0, back in the mid '30's. The Tars' win broke a long Army domination. Cutter booted the difficult field goal that was the day's only score. Slade also was heavyweight boxing champ of the academy and had a fine intercollegiate career as a boxer.

You don't read much about them, or any other submarine man, because they are in a service wherein the impossible is regarded as too commonplace to bring to the attention of the Public Relations officer. But they and the other men of the deep are doing an incomparable job. Without fanfare the Navy's submarines have destroyed a third of Japan's merchant marine. They have helped make possible the recapture of many islands in the South Pacific, but cutting the enemy's ability to supply and reinforce his island garrisons.

Munitions-carrying American subs helped the Americans and Filipinos hold out as long as they did on Bataan.

The easy informality of the sports field abounds in U. S .submarines. The bench-warmer, so to speak, can say what he pleases to the star, or captain. Fewer "sirs" are heard per cubic foot in a sub than anywhere else in the armed world, but the discipline is first rate. The danger which surrounds a sub is impartial to captain and lowest class torpedoman alike. It makes brothers of them.

We've got subs so far out in the Pacific that they've taken pictures of Fujiyama and have sat in on a Japanese horse race in which, presumably, the trusting form players were betrayed. But some of them get in trouble.

There was one we heard about not long ago which had a ship's cook who was renowned for his bread-making. He was as proud of his bread as the boys in his pig boat were. He kneaded it with a flourish each day, during an infernally long mission westward, and the baking bread's sweet perfume wafted through the big iron cigar each afternoon to bolster morale.

Well, this sub got in an awful jam. It had knocked off its share of Japanese shipping within sight of the Nips' coastline, but it was spotted. Jap destroyers began to drop their ash-cans on it. The depth charges blew out the lights in the sub and rang its shell as if ten thousand hammers were beating on it.

There was a terrible pause after a while and the men stood there tensely, waiting for the next can to drop. But in the darkness there came an indignant clanging of pots and pans. The cook was sore, he scuffled out of his galley and roared, "—— —— ——, captain, do something! My dough is sinking!"

Another U. S. submarine, caught in a tough spot, was trying to harvest its deck-bound crew in time to submerge. It was under heavy fire from several sides. The last two boys finally jumped inside and slammed the hatch. One wiped his brow and said, "Golly, I sure feel sorry for those guys in the Army."

"What the hell do you mean?" his sweating pal demanded.

"Well, in the Army the other guy shoots at you," he said. "Here, they only shoot at your ship."

Hello, 'Frisco, Hello

Far West Likely Spot For Pro Grid Expansion

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—The National Football League is ready to push its frontier westward, to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

This appears to be the initial move, officials say, of an expansion phase which promises to become so extensive after the war the pro circuit may be split into separate major leagues like baseball.

"I am confident expansion is inevitable," commissioner Elmer Layden said, thus indicating that he was in favor of the league accepting franchise bids from the two Pacific Coast cities.

Being a comparatively new organization, the football league can talk with more ease about growing pains than such long established sports as baseball. It is difficult to find a trace of a rumor that major baseball contemplates any change, despite the advancement of air transportation after the war which will make long trips a matter of hours rather than days.

The football league may not even wait until the post-war sports boom to start growing. Last June Ted Collins of the radio, was granted a franchise to operate in Boston and he may field a team next fall. Several wealthy businessmen, entire strangers to the sports world, have talked to Layden about the possibilities of starting up in San Francisco.

Don Ameche of the movies applied for a Los Angeles franchise last June which was tabled until the league's winter meeting, tentatively scheduled for next week. Later Ameche withdrew his application and two other groups were reported to have applied immediately.

The success of 1943 has given impetus to requests for entrance into the league. The eight teams played before an average of 26,811 customers a game, as compared with an average of 19,260 a year ago.

Phil-Pitt Merger Is Out, Bell Says

Narbeth, Pa., Jan. 3 (AP).—Bert Bell, coowner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, said today the Steelers-Philadelphia Eagles merger has not been renewed "and probably won't be unless Pittsburgh is made the base of operations."

Bell said at his home here that the agreement by which the clubs played as one team in the National Football League last fall expired December 5.

If the manpower is available, Bell said, the Steelers will operate alone. If not: "I owe it to the fans of Pittsburgh to see that at least the majority of games are played there next year—that is, if we make an agreement with any other club."

Art Rooney is the Steelers' other owner. The Eagles are owned by Alexis Thompson, now an Army lieutenant.

Illinois Beats Badgers, 45-43, In Overtime

Madison, Wis., Jan. 3 (AP).—A favored Illinois basketball team launched its Big Ten campaign successfully by turning back a stubborn Wisconsin five 45 to 43 in an overtime contest here tonight before 8000 fans.

The Illini appeared to have the game well under control during the first half, going to the lockers at the intermission with a lead of 25 to 18.

In the second period the Illini pushed far in front, largely on the power of Forward Stan Patrick who scored 20 points, 15 in the last half.

Slowly the Badgers crept up, and with less than a minute to play, Russ Wendland, a naval trainee and former Northwestern star, tied the count at 41-all with a free throw on Patrick's only foul of the game.

This ended the regulation game. Guard Walton Kirk put the Illini in front again on a free throw on O'Brien's foul and Patrick added another on Wendland's miscue. He made it 45 to 41 on a basket a second later, and his mates managed to control the ball except for a few seconds when Glen Selbo, Wisconsin guard, got hold of it for a field goal.

Zivic Launches 14th Year by KO

Pittsburgh, Jan. 3 (AP).—Old rubber-legs Fritzie Zivic launched his fourteenth year in the ring tonight by a spectacular tenth-round knockout over Ossie (Bulldog) Harris, slugging Pittsburgh Negro. The former welter king weighed 152 for the contest, his 180th, to 155 for Harris.

Zivic, always a more polished boxer than slugger floored Harris for an eight count earlier in the tenth then sent him down for the 10. Despite a snowstorm, 4200 fans paid $11,700 to witness the battle, which ended 2 seconds before the final bell.

Arkansas Derby April 1

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 3 (AP).—Nominations will close March 15 for the $1000 added Arkansas Derby which will end the spring racing season at Oaklawn Park here April 1, Racing Secretary Eugene Bury said today.

Gonzaga, Led By Cranston, Wins, 29-10

Gonzaga's tight defense limited Anacostia's scoring to a lone foul shot in the first half yesterday, as the Purple went on to beat the inexperienced Indians, 29 to 10, on the Gonzaga floor.

Led by Scott Cranston, the Gonzaga regulars built up a 16-to-1 lead at halftime and second and third stringers played most of the second half.

Notre Dame Beats Purdue Second Time

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 3 (AP).—The University of Notre Dame came back strong after trailing at the intermission in a basketball game with Purdue University tonight to beat the Boilermakers for the second time this season, 35 to 32.

Behind 25-19 at the half, the Irish slowly but steadily erased Purdue's hard-won margin. Five Notre Dame field goals were tipped in as the Irish went ahead 33-31 with four minutes left in play. Purdue scored only one point in the last 12 minutes.

Bill Lodge, leading boilermaker scorer, was declared ineligible because of scholastic deficiency, but despite his loss Purdue opened speedily and took an early lead. Freshman Forward Paul Hoffman and Sophomore Guard Charles Haag sparked the attack.

Charitable Wins Feature At Tropical

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP).—Racing over a heavy churned-up strip, G. R. Watkins' Charitable outlasted Mrs. E. C. Salsbury's confidently backed Sparkling Maid by a length and a half to win the featured Hallendale Purse as the final four days of the current meeting began this afternoon. The pair raced as if harnessed together into the short stretch, where the $6.20 for $2 second choice gradually drew away. J. H. Carr's Fair Call was third in the field of five, three lengths behind.

Considering the deep condition of the track following heavy overnight rain, Charitable's time of 1:12 4/5 for the six furlongs was excellent. Another shower fell just before this race. The 7-year-old son of Wise Counsellor was perfectly handled by Porter Roberts.

The sport drew a crowd of 5339. Beginning today, the feature race carried a purse of $1500 instead of $1200, while two secondary events were valued at the latter figure. It marked the third time at the meeting that purses were boosted.

Sparkling Maid, saddled by Hirsch Jacobs and ridden by Ted Atkinson, wore four bandages but she turned in a game effort nevertheless and only weakened in the final stages. She appeared slightly sore. Atkinson had the filly away well and urged her into a head advantage over Charitable. The latter, twice a failure at the meeting found the third time the charm. The veteran, on the outside of Sparkling Maid, finally imposed his will upon the filly while being kept under strong urging to the wire. Fair Call outran the others almost from the start.

Teddy Atkinson's followers collected after the popular pilot guided Wise Brave, a $10.90 for $2 shot, to victory in the seventh contest. Milk Flip, a supposed "good thing," led the victor to the stretch, where Atkinson's whiplashing helped Wise Brave to draw off by a length and a half. Fancy Free was a poor third, while Company Rest, the favorite, faltered after forcing the early pace.

Flemingsburg, $16.50, won the last event by three lengths, giving Jockey Ted Atkinson a consecutive double. War Communique was second and Jay Stevens third.

The day's play was $395,073.

G.W. High Five Easily Beats Devitt, 43-25

George Washington High School's Presidents won their fifth game in six starts last night, beating Devitt Prep, 40 to 25, on the Alexandrians' court. G. W. meets Eastern High today at 4 p. m., also in Alexandria.

Marshall Boaz scored 11 points in the first half as the Presidents led, 22-10, and Joe Hensley took over with a hot hand in the second half to better the winners margin. Boaz and Hensley tied for scoring honors with 15 points each.

Highs, Preps Move Into Cage Season

The District prep and high school basketball season, interrupted slightly by the Christmas holidays, will continue operation today as Coolidge High plays host to St. John's Prep and Eastern clashes with George Washington of Alexandria.

The interhigh series will begin Friday with a double-header at Tech gym. Another is scheduled Saturday. Anacostia will meet favored Coolidge at 7:30 p. m. in the first interhigh game of the season and Tech will play Western in the 8:45 p. m. windup Friday. On Saturday Central will open with Roosevelt at 7:30 and Eastern meets Wilson at 8:45.

At least one of the tilts today should be an interesting one, for Coolidge won its preseason games and St. John's handily took its first outing.

District high school basketball officials announced by Physical Education Director Dallas Shirley are Joe Mitchell of the District Playground Department, Al Doran, coach at George Washington High and Bucky Buscher of the Metropolitan Police Department. Assisting them will be Bernie Buscher, Tony Latona, Everett Russell, Curly White and Bill Roe.

The week's schedule follows:

Today—Eastern High at George Washington High; St. John's at Coolidge.

Tomorrow—Devitt at Gonzaga; Roosevelt at Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Saturday—Bullis vs. Navy Plebes at Annapolis.

Macricostas, Evans Added to Mat Card

Two more bouts have been added to tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena featuring George Macricostas, the Golden Greek, and Don Evans, the Pacific Coast ace.

The Yellow Mask, who the other night clubbed Michele Leone into defeat, will tackle Tom Mahoney of Philadelphia, a reformed prize fighter, in one of the 30-minute matches.

In the other Leone will seek to redeem himself in a battle against Jack Bishop, the Iowa lad.

Kirkwood in Army, Escapes Charge

Philadelphia, Jan. 3 (AP).—Reginald Thomas Kirkwood, 22, son of the trick golf shot artist, Joe Kirkwood, was inducted into the Army today, 24 hours before he was to have appeared in U. S. District Court for sentencing on a parole violation charge.

Young Kirkwood left immediately for California where he said he would play in the Los Angeles and San Francisco Opens during his three-week furlough.

Disposition of the parole violation charge was not announced.

Gallaudet Plays Ft. Myer Friday Night

Gallaudet College has arranged to play Fort Myer Friday night on the Roosevelt High School court in place of Randolph-Macon, as the Virginians have given up basketball for the year.

The Blue has broken even in four college games to date but has lost to three service teams in as many outings. Game time with Fort Myer is 8 p. m.

Other games for local college clubs this week are Catholic University at Navy on Saturday and Maryland vs. Virginia at Charlottesville on the same day.

Major-Minor Body To Meet Soon for Postwar Plans

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—Postwar planning committees, named for the major and minor leagues at the December baseball meetings in New York, will probably meet for the first time in Chicago later this month, Commissioner K. M. Landis said today.

Among the items for consideration is a workable plan of funneling players back into baseball who now are in service or were previously employed in minor leagues which discontinued for the duration.

Many players in disbanded minors were absorbed by major league clubs, being reserved on the theory that after the war they would be turned back. There have been indications, however, that Landis may declare all such players free agents.

The postwar committees also will discuss the advisability of territorial changes of minor leagues so as to make for more compact circuits

Crowd Boos As Heavier Boy Scores

By Walter Haight

Frankie Wills, thanks to a split decision in his favor, wasn't spoiled by Charlie (The Spoiler) Bennett last night, but he will have to be kept in the fistic icebox for a while. Wills, a 1-to-3 favorite as the 10-rounder began, failed to meet the fate of Eddie Kane and Nick Latsios at the hands of the Negro boy, but had his hands full in taking the verdict just the same. Almost 10 pounds in his favor and an unwillingness of Bennett to get under full steam early, worked to Wills' advantage and earned him enough points to save the favorite players in the late stages.

The "natural" served to draw 1418 fans who supplied a gate of $2195 despite the inclement weather and booed the main bout decision. Both fighters are counter-punchers and each was guilty of a fault that served to slow up the action. Wills simply refused to infight while Bennett was absolutely against leading except on rare occasions. In addition to getting in the most potent blows, Wills served up a continual barrage of near misses.

Tangle of Gloves

The action began like the evening breeze. Bennett, as usual, held his guard high. Wills tried to swing over it, with the net result of his gloves tangling with Bennett's octopus-like arms. Only a few light taps were scored in the opening session.

Any chance that Bennett had was lost in rounds two, three and four when he failed to put a glove on Wills that had an appreciable zip in it. Wills won these rounds because he was the aggressor.

It was not until the fifth that Bennett came out in the open. He got in some good punches, mostly counter blows after Wills had missed with an off-the-beam right. In the sixth, Bennett made his best showing. Answering his pleading handlers, he ripped into Frankie and took the session by a comfortable margin. From this point to the finish, Wills had a litle more respect for his rival. Probably figuring himself well ahead on points, Wills fought only when in the open and once inside, draped his 150 pounds on his rival's 141 at every opportunity.

Bennett Has Edge in Ninth

Bennett had a slight edge in the ninth round that furnished few thrills and then they ended the bout with an all-even tenth that went the way of Wills' swing. Bennett's counter punch and then Wills' hug.

The decision was a split one. Judge O. U. Singer saw it Bennett's way. My score card gave Wills four rounds, Bennett two and recorded four as even.

Mollis in Comeback

Chief action in the preliminaries was furnished by Tommy Mollis, a one-time sparring partner of the Dundee boys in Baltimore, and Bobby Brown, the Wild Bull of You Street. Mollis, who fought a prelim at Old Portner's Arena in Alexandria 10 years ago, weathered a storm of Brown ambition and then gradually worked his way to victory, outsmarting his tiring rival. Mollis wore a tattered pair of boxing shoes and scared expression but he was pounds the best and the decision was crowd approved.

In the opening four-rounder, Georgia Farrell earned a decision over Billy Downs. Georgia Daniels used his superior height and reach to advantage to whip out a six-round verdict over Gene Brown.

Bainbridge Loses 10 Big Leaguers

Bainbridge, Md., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Bainbridge Naval Training Station's potentially great 1944 baseball team received a heavy jolt today with the announcement that 10 former major league players would be moved from the reservation this week.

Nine were due to leave tomorrow, while Johnny Mize, former St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants first baseman, was to be held over until the end of the week in order to finish work in the physical instructors' school.

Those leaving tomorrow include Tom Ferrick, formerly of the Cleveland Indians; Joe Grace and Johnny Lucadello of the St. Louis Browns, Barney McCoskey of the Detroit Tigers, Vern Olsen and Marvin Felderman of the Chicago Cubs, George Dickey of the Chicago White Sox, Jack Hallett of the Cleveland Indians and Eddie Pellegrini of the Boston Red Sox.

All are being transferred to undisclosed posts.

Heavies Matched On Uline's Program

A heavyweight battle was added last night to the show next Monday night at Uline's Arena. Promoter Goldie Ahearn lined up Sailor Eddie White a hard puncher, against Danny Cox, a local colored heavy who has done most of his boxing elsewhere. They go eight rounds or less. The two other eights on the program pit Billy Banks, Washington lightweight, against Victor Creelman, winner of 30 straight battles and Aaron Perry, District lightweight, against Hibert Samuels of Philadelphia.

White has knocked out five of the last six men to face him and in Cox meets a heavyweight of long experience and a rugged puncher. Cox recently was honorably discharged from the United States Army.

Hoyt Urges Plans to Speed Invasion News

By the Associated Press

Palmer Hoyt, retiring domestic director of the Office of War Information, declared yesterday that arrangements for news from the invasion of Western Europe "should be built right into the battle plans."

HEALY

Hoyt, holding an informal press conference immediately after turning over his OWI post to George W. Healy, jr., managing editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, said he expected that the invasion strategy would include plans for accurate and swift transmission of news from the battle fronts.

The Marine Corps set up "a swell pattern" of news and picture coverage at Tarawa and the landings in New Britain, he said.

"Unless the arrangements to provide the news of battle are built into the battle plans, the people are not going to get the story. That was proved, I think, at Tarawa, which I consider the greatest coverage in the history of warfare."

Healy, sworn in as head of OWI's domestic branch only 20 minutes before, said he concurred with Hoyt that the public should get an accurate, realistic picture of military operations as rapidly as security will permit.

"Palmer Hoyt and I both believe the American people have strong eyes and good ears," he said. "They can take the news straight without folding up.

"They are not color blind, either. If you try to color the news to achieve any purpose, they will react unfavorably."

Returning to his position as publisher of the Morning Oregonian at Portland, Hoyt said his six months in Washington had convinced him "more firmly than ever of the need for continuing the domestic branch of OWI as a vital war function."

"We are getting out more military and naval news, with increased cooperation from the armed services. But we will always during the war need a civilian advocate to represent the interests of the press and the public."

Healy, introduced by Hoyt as "a damned good newspaperman, one of the best in the country," said he hoped his stay in Washington won't last "longer than a year."

Esquire Filing Plea This Week In Mailing Ban

Attorneys for oggle-eyed Esky will ask District Court some time this week to prevent enforcement of Postmaster General Frank Walker's order rescinding Esquire Magazine's second-class mail privileges, Publisher David Smart told the Associated Press yesterday in Chicago.

Smart, who said that he had not been officially informed of Walker's order until yesterday, expressed confidence that Mademoiselle Varga, the chubby Sultan, Oncle Rafe and the rest of Esky's so-called "lascivious" friends would be restored their right to go through the mails at reduced rates. Esquire will sue for an injunction, Smart declared.

The publisher also stated that he was hearing "plenty of repercussions" from servicemen, to whom more than 200,000 copies are said to be mailed monthly in the combat zones.

What is a foxhole without a picture of a Varga girl? What is an atoll without the Sultan's double-dealings to chuckle at? What is a recreation hall without a few Esky covers?

Smart & Co., figure that the magazine's contribution to morale is a potent weapon in its favor, and are willing to go to the United States Supreme Court to prove that Esky's mission in life is not purely "indecent," as charged by the Postoffice Department in hearing before a handpicked trio of its own judges.

As for Walker, he, too, is willing to carry the fight as far as he can, and made his order effective February 28, to give Esquire time to appeal. Meanwhile the magazine, which already has spent $40,000 in lawyer's fees, $10,000 for stenographic transcripts and $2500 for transportation and board of witnesses, is proceeding to publish without batting an adjective.

Lifeboat Braves Flaming Oil

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—Construction of a wooden lifeboat which does not catch fire even when passing through 40-foot flames fed by burning oil was announced here today.

An asbestos hood sprayed by 30 gallons of water a minute covers the boat, the British information services said. The craft is intended especially for use by crews of torpedoed tankers.

Hopkins Gets Job Abroad, Capitol Hears

By Mary Spargo

Usually well informed sources on Capitol Hill said yesterday that Harry Hopkins, assistant to President Roosevelt, would go to London within 60 days to assume new duties with the Inter-Allied Commission for Europe.

The commission was established after the Moscow conference to represent the interest of the United Nations in the political developments in Europe. John G. Winant, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is at present United States representative on the commission. It is not known how the projected Hopkins appointment will affect his position.

The Inter-Allied Commission for Europe is not to be confused with the Inter-Allied Commission for relief which is one of the numerous agencies concerned with postwar relief problems.

Called Fourth-Term Move

The predicted Hopkins assignment to London was regarded in some Capitol Hill quarters as part of the President's preparation to seek a fourth term. It has been freely predicted that in order to placate critics of the New Deal—now defunct by presidential edict—Hopkins would be sent abroad to a foreign post where he could be less of a target during the campaign this year.

Belief was expressed yesterday that David K. Niles, one of the President's assistants, who has been violently attacked by conservative Democrats as well as Republicans, will also follow Hopkins into a foreign assignment.

Niles is the President's chief contact with organized labor, and a shift in his job would be interpreted as another swing to the right on the part of the President.

Niles became an administrative assistant after serving as labor adviser for the War Production Board.

A Harvard graduate, Niles was assistant to Hopkins when the latter was administrator of WPA and Secretary of Commerce.

At the time the Inter-Allied Commission for Europe was established, Russia was understood to have been extremely anxious that the American delegate be one known to and approved by Russia. Hopkins has been to Russia, talked with Stalin, and is understood to be most acceptable to the Russians. Winant is also understood to have met with Russian approval.

Removal of Hopkins and Niles from the domestic scene is known to have been sought by Southern Democrats for some time, and would be interpreted as a concession to party unity in view of the coming campaign.

William Strang, Undersecretary of State in the British Foreign Office, is Britain's representative, and Fedeor Tarsovich Gusev, chief of the Second European Department in the Soviet Commissariat, represents Russia.

Roosevelt Orders FEPC Dispute Probe

President Roosevelt named a three-man committee yesterday to investigate a dispute involving the Fair Employment Practices Committee, railway labor organizations and 16 Southern carriers over the question of racial discrimination.

The members are: Judge Walter P. Stacy, Raleigh, N. C., chairman; Judge William H. Holly of the U. S. District Court, Chicago, and Mayor Frank J. Lausche of Cleveland.

The railroads involved had declined to abide by an order of the FEPC for greater employment of Negroes and the agency referred the dispute to the President. White House Secretary Stephen Early said the committee of three did not supercede the FEPC but merely would explore and investigate the situation for the Chief Executive.

Mr. Roosevelt in identical letters of appointment told the committee members he planned to ask the committee to meet in Washington "in the very near future" with representatives of carriers and labor organizations.

The President said he was sure that "agreements shaped in good sense and good will can be reached."

Held on Theft Charge

James Davis, 24, of 810 F st. nw., was held yesterday under $500 bond for grand jury action on the charge of stealing 400 spark plugs valued at $180 from the firm of L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc.

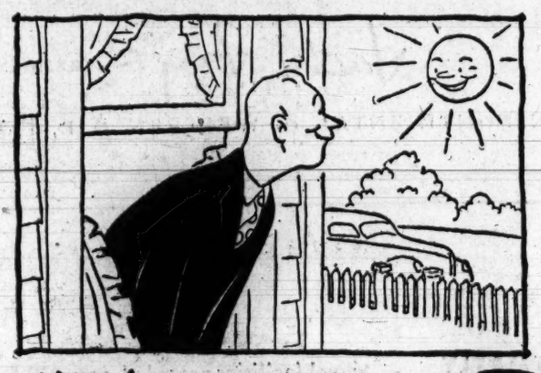
Why your Imperial dealer has two answers
"YES" and "NO"

YES! There are thousands of folks who, like you, use care and good judgment in their selection of whiskey. When they go to their store or tavern they ask for IMPERIAL because they know this famed whiskey is "velveted" for extra smoothness.

NO! You can't always get as much IMPERIAL as you want and sometimes you can get none at all. Because a whiskey that has so many loyal friends moves fastest in times of scarcity just as it does in normal times.


YES! There's one ray of sunshine. A limited but substantial supply of IMPERIAL is shipped into this city every month. Best way to make sure of getting your share is to ask for IMPERIAL every time.

NO! Not a drop of whiskey is at present being distilled—therefore pre-war stocks used in the IMPERIAL blend have to last for a longer time than originally intended. Like every other distillery we have a full-time alcohol-for-war job.

YES! The IMPERIAL label is the same as before the war. So's the quality. So's the price—except for added state or federal excise taxes. So don't give up—ask for IMPERIAL often and you'll probably get it more often than not. And when you get it, you've got America's smoothest whiskey!

We'll Go All The Way to get you there

The present shortage of airplane seats is just as embarrassing to us as it is to you.

Our primary job is the job of getting you where you want to go in the way you want to travel—and it really hurts when we have to turn away good customers who want to travel on our airline.

All airlines, of course, are looking forward to the day when this traffic jam can be eased by the addition of more planes, which will come when pressing military needs are reduced.

In the meantime, we of TWA want to do all we possibly can to get you where you want to go—on our planes if that is possible, by some other means if that just isn't in the picture.

Our personnel have a lot of experience and familiarity with all means of transportation.

Many times they have been able to "help people out" just by knowing where to turn.

At all times, you will find them ready to go all the way in solving really pressing travel problems, and I hope you will not hesitate to call on them.

Naturally, our ticket offices are busy, and are somewhat handicapped by the general man-power shortage.

But what we may lack, for the moment, in facilities, we sincerely try to make up for in earnest effort; and we will be very glad to have you try us when you're faced with a really necessary trip.

Jack Frye, PRESIDENT
TRANSCONTINENTAL & WESTERN AIR, INC.

Guide to Wartime Travel

All transportation systems are hard-pressed these days, for reasons you fully understand. No matter how you go, it will be very helpful if you cooperate by following these simple guide rules for wartime travel.

1 PLAN CAREFULLY

Travel only when necessary and try to plan ahead. Avoid last-minute decisions as far as possible.

2 RESERVE ACCOMMODATIONS EARLY

Let us know as soon as you can when you want to travel and where you want to go. About a week in advance is desirable.

3 AVOID LONG TRIPS

Travel priorities apply on trips of over 300 miles. Unless you hold a high priority for your airline trip, you may be removed en route several times on any long trip.

4 CANCEL PROMPTLY

If it becomes necessary to cancel reservations, you will win our sincere thanks if you let us know at once. Maybe someone will do as much for you some day.

5 TRAVEL LIGHT

This is for your own convenience as well as for other war needs. The less luggage you carry, the more space will be available for other important wartime passengers, mail and cargo. And with travel facilities crowded, you will find a single bag much easier to manage than several.

6 BLAME THE ENEMY

It's hard, these days, to keep from "flying off the handle" now and then. But remember that present travel congestion is the unavoidable result of the war, and not the fault of anyone with whom you come in contact. If you feel like cutting loose, cut loose at Hitler and Tojo. They're the guilty parties.

The Federal Diary

authority that Selective Service officials insist that Federal agencies must ask immediate 60-day temporary deferments for all fathers the Government believes are necessary to carry forward the war program. Federal officials are fighting against this proposed order and it's logical that they should. After all, many Government fathers have high call numbers and they won't be reclassified or called up for induction for several months and it would be a waste of a lot of people's time to go through the long process of deferment when it isn't necessary. Moreover, it would credit the Government with many unreal deferments. Furthermore, that's not treating the Government the same as industry as the President ordered.

Policy Set By WMC

The new policy was decided on by the War Manpower Commission at the suggestion of White House underlings. Behind it was the fear of another Congressional investigation. As revealed here, Federal agencies planned to adopt a wide variety of standards and it was felt that Uncle Sam, as a single employer, should have a uniform policy and that objective is commendable. It would have lead to confusion and misunderstanding for each agency to have a different policy. But Uncle Sam has every type of employe on his payroll and it now appears that the only sensible way for the central committee to handle the problem is to decide each case on its merits. To repeat, it's now up to the central committee to see that the father draft in Government is liberalized as the President suggested.

Models selected for the Government Girl fashion show must report tonight at 8 o'clock in the conference room of The Post Building.

Civil Service Commission yesterday issued a memo to its investigators clarifying its instructions of November 3 which kicked up a congressional rumpus and a forthcoming inquiry by the Dies Committee. The commission made it plain it hadn't rescinded the November instructions on loyalty investigations but that the memo would help the 700-odd investigators understand the commission's policy. It was charged by members of Congress that the November instructions would hamper the investigation of Communists and party liners.

The memo makes it clear that the commission believes a Communist or a party liner "has no place in Government in time of war or in time of peace. Such a person," it explains, "has clearly indicated that he is willing to take orders from a political group located in a foreign nation and whose first loyalty is to a foreign government . . . It is absolutely impossible to imagine the Soviet government following a policy of tolerating as one of their public officials, a Soviet citizen whose primary loyalty was to a political group whose primary loyalty, in turn, was to any foreign government."

Commission's Attitude

The commission stood by its instructions not to ask questions regarding membership or interest in Spanish Loyalists, American Civil Liberties Union, Socialist Party, League of Women Shoppers, Harry Bridges Defense Committee, Washington Bookshop, and Lawyers Guild. It's obvious, the commission said, that neither the Civil Liberties Union nor the Socialist Party are "front" organizations. About the Harry Bridges Defense Committee, the commission explained that organization really belongs in the general category of prohibitions against the asking of questions on union affiliations.

It's well known, the commission said, that the Lawyers Guild, Washinton Bookshop, League of Women Shoppers, and Spanish Loyalist groups are made up of genuine progressives and liberals, some conservatives, and also followers of the party line.

"The only reason we have instructed investigators not to ask questions about membership in certain organizations, admittedly made up of both progressives and Communist Party liners," the commission explained, "is because we felt that our investigators were making no progress in ferreting out persons who were not suitable for Government employment, but, on the other hand, were playing into the hands of those who desire to sabotage our work by leading the American people to believe that we are engaged in the business of persecuting genuine liberals and progressives."

The commission likewise defended its ban against asking questions regarding labor unions in this language: "... we do not believe that it can be said that membership in a labor union—even one whose leaders have at various times been characterized as followers of the Communist Party line—standing by itself proves that an applicant is a follower of the line." The commission says its only concern is that its representatives should not directly or indirectly persecute, or even give the appearance of persecuting a person because of the fact that he has exercised his legal right to belong to a labor union.

Consideration of Ending War Services Asked

Resolutions asking the Federation of Citizens Association to probe the advisability of abolishing the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office and the Civilian War Services was asked last night in resolutions adopted by the Metropolis View Citizens Association.

Another resolution asked that greater publicity be given to the dates for collection of paper in the salvage drive by the Boy Scouts.

Home Rule Measure To Be Revised

By James E. Chinn

Chairman McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada of the Senate District Committee disclosed yesterday he plans to make some revisions in his "home rule" bill as a result of numerous suggestions made by civic and business leaders during the recent extensive series of public hearings.

None of the changes McCarran has in mind was mentioned, however, but he is said to have under consideration a suggestion that the elected city council of seven, provided in his original measure, be increased to nine—the two additional members to be appointed by the President to represent the interests of the Federal Government in the District.

Senator McCarran plans to remodel his proposal for a new form of city government were made known as he undertook a study of the voluminous transcript of the record of the hearings which he aims to complete before Congress reconvenes Monday. The revised bill will then be whipped into shape and submitted to the "home rule" subcommittee which Senator McCarran heads. The other members are Senators Overton of Louisiana, and Tydings of Maryland (Democrats), and Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota.

Other Suggestions

Other suggestions made at the hearings which Senator McCarran intends to review carefully before rewriting the bill include:

1. Clarification of the provision relating to the qualification of voters.

2. Substitution of a city-wide machine for the proposed ward system for electing the city council.

3. Elimination of a provision which would set up a congressional check or veto of actions of the city council.

In its present form the bill would allow any citizen to vote who has reached the age of 21 and who has been a "bona fide" resident of the District for one year.

A suggestion has been made that a literacy test be required as one of the qualifications for a voting privilege. A question also has been raised as to whether the franchise should be extended to residents who maintain voting residences in the States.

Wilkins Offers Plan

The proposal for a city-wide election rather than a ward system was predicted on a fear that councilmen elected from the comparatively small seven wards that would be created might selfishly devote their attention to ward rather than the overall problems of the District.

As Senator McCarran began his study of the transcript of the hearings he received a letter from Thomas M. Wilkins, Washington attorney, suggesting that the problem of enfranchising residents of the District be done by an act of Congress retroceding to Maryland a large area of the District and leaving the actual seat of government well within the outside boundaries of the District.

"This plan," he said, "may remove the objections of the majority of the residents of the District to the outright granting of the right to vote to such residents by constitutional amendment.

"The plan also has the advantage of making the District of Columbia encompass no more than an area sufficient, with a reasonable 'cushion' of space, to embrace practically all of the Government office buildings in the District, and is within the spirit of the introduction to the act of retrocession of the County of Alexandria to the State of Virginia."

Baby Broker Bill Hearings Coming Soon

Long awaited hearings on the so-called "baby broker" bill probably will be held next week, soon after Congress ends its holiday recess, it was said yesterday by Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee.

The measure, designed primarily to prevent careless placement of babies for adoption, has slumbered in a Senate District Subcommittee headed by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada since June 28, when it passed the House.

In preparation for the hearings, Senator McCarran is compiling a list of witnesses who already have requested an opportunity either to express their views on the House-approved legislation, or suggest modifications.

These include representatives of the Washington Board of Trade, Federation of Citizens Associations, Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, District Women's Bar Association, Federation of Women's Clubs and Council of Social Agencies.

Another Senate District Subcommitee, of which Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana is chairman, plans to hold hearings next week on a bill which the House passed November 15 to revise the law providing aid to dependent children in the District to make it conform with laws of most States. The changes embodied in the measure were recommended by the Social Security Board, and indorsed by the District Commissioners.

Gallinger to Use Penicillin To Treat Venereal Diseases

The new "miracle" drug, penicillin, will be used for the first time in Washington at Gallinger Municipal Hospital some time this month in its recently completed Rapid Treatment Center for venereal diseases, it was learned yesterday.

It also was announced that about 10 persons already have undergone the 5-day syphilis treatment since it was instituted at Gallinger early in October, and although each patient is given monthly blood tests for a year afterward to prevent recurrence, doctors have found it the most successful method ever used. Formerly the syphilis cure was a matter of about two years.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting superintendent, revealed yesterday that the institution has been promised a limited supply of penicillin by the United States Public Health Servce for use in the new unit, which will be opened as soon as it is inspected tomorrow or Thursday by representatives of the Engineer Commissioner's office.

The penicillin, Dr. Seckinger pointed out, will be used only in selected cases in which sufa drugs have not proved effective. Dr. Sidney Olansky, in charge of the Rapid Treatment Center, added that penicillin treatment will clear up 90 per cent of cases whe. other drugs have failed. In Gallinger, he said, use will be partly experimental, partly therapeutic.

The new buildings, Dr. Seckinger stated, will house 50 patients simultaneously and probably will treat about that many acute cases weekly. About five days is required for syphilis and three or four weeks for gonorrhea cures. Current facilities, Dr. Seckinger said, already are operating at capacity.

Land Urges Some Ship Lines Operate Postwar Air Service

Admiral E. S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, recommended last night at the United Nations Forum that many steamship lines operate postwar complementary airplane lines, and R. S. Damon, vice president and general manager of American Airlines, predicted great increases in speed of commercial planes as the result of lessons learned in the war.

Praising the superlative performance of United Nations' planes in the present war, Damon said that air power has changed the course of the war from impending disaster to a fair promise of victory. He explained that some military planes range between 400 and 500 miles per hour and if progress is continued, it is reasonable to assume that 20 years from now transports may cruise at speeds of 400 miles an hour or more.

After insisting that American shipping companies should not be barred from ship-air transportation, Admiral Land declared: "I believe that the United States Maritime Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board should sit down together and jointly determine airline problems where they involve a ship line or affect a ship line by their competition."

Other speakers on aviation were Dr. Wei Tao-ming, Chinese Ambador to the United States; William A. M. Burden, aviation assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, and Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine.

9 More Scout Troops Join Waste Paper Salvage Drive

As D. C. Salvage Committee officials prepared to make first "regular" collections in The Post-sponsored waste paper salvage campaign this weekend, nine more scout troops enrolled in the all-out drive yesterday while several others indicated plans to register.

Nearly two score of troops have already signed for regular collections on Saturday, salvage officials said. They reiterated the need for paper salvage, 40 per cent of which is estimated unreclaimed in Washington.

Newly-enlisted troops include:

Troop 211—Joseph Jamieson, scoutmaster, 8504 Garfield st. nw., Wisconsin 5882; headquarters, Bethesda First Baptist Church, accumulation depot, 6742 Fairfax rd., Bethesda, Md. Troop 5—John H. Bayless, scoutmaster, 4311 East-West Highway, Wisconsin 1333; headquarters, St. Alban's Church; depot, Washington Cathedral. Troop 15—John A. Bennett, scoutmaster, 4402 Maple ave., Wisconsin 2755; headquarters and depot, 34th and Lowell sts. nw.

Troop 56, Herbert C. Lucker, scoutmaster, 1545 N. 19th st., Arlington, Chestnut 7666, headquarters and depot, 22d and P sts. nw; Troop 55, F G. Butts, jr., scoutmaster, 2346 40th st. nw., Emerson 4938, headquarters and depot, Gordon Junior High School; Troop 510, Fleming V. Briscoe, scoutmaster, 2712 O st. nw., headquarters and depot, Mount Zion Church.

Troop 97, William M. Rohrer, scoutmaster, 3434 Mount Pleasant st. nw., Columbia 4922, headquarters and depot, U. B. Church, North Capital and R sts.; Troop 34, W. R. DeHart, scoutmaster, 2150 Branch ave. ne., Atlantic 3994, headquarters and depot, Pennsylvania ave. and Branch ave. se.; Troop 215, Van E. Rouse, jr., scoutmaster, Hotel Roosevelt, Decatur 0800, headquarters and depot, Church of the Ascension, Sligo ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Rain, Snow Flood Cellars, Block Roads

One and eight one-hundredths inches of snow and rainfall in 24 hours left streams swollen, basements flooded and several roadways blocked in this section last night.

Snow which began falling at 9:10 p. m. Sunday turned into rain at 12:59 a. m. yesterday when the temperature dropped to 32 and splotches of ice began to form on streets. At 3 a. m., however, the thermometer rose above the freezing point and the thin ice was washed away before it created a traffic hazard.

Baltimore Boulevard and Defense Highway at Bladensburg, Md., were flooded early last night by the rising Anacostia River. Prince Georges County Police rerouted traffic over Rhode Island ave., extended. A moderate rise, but no flood of the Potomac River was forecast.

For today the Weather Bureau said it would be fair with moderate temperature. Bus and air travel remained on schedule.

More Strict ABC Rules Seem Closer

New liquor regulations for the District, including one requiring more records to be submitted to the ABC Board by retailers, seemed a step closer yesterday after a session between the District Commissioners, board members, and other local officials to discuss the general liquor situation.

The meeting was called on receipt of a letter from Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, asking if the board had sufficient authority to cope with present problems and calling on the Commissioners to ask legislation if necessary.

The new regulations were presented verbally by the board to the Commissioners on December 6, and at that time board members were told to present proposals in writing so that the Commissioners could hold public hearings.

The proposals were sent to the corporation counsel's office last week and are to be forwarded to the Commissioners within two or three days, it was learned last night. ABC officials and members of the corporation counsel's staff conferred on them following the Commissioners' meeting.

The Commissioners refused to discuss the substance of yesterday's meeting pending delivery of a reply to Representative Randolph later.

Welfare Head Praises Jail Management

Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, yesterday said conditions at the District Jail are "very, very good," and that he thought the institution was being well administered.

He made the statements following a confidential meeting of the board of public welfare, where charges of favoritism at the jail, made by a prisoner, were discussed.

McReynolds admitted the reports on monthly inspections of the jail by the penal insitutes committee were made only to the board. He said it was thought correction was better than publicity.

He explained the board usually met in executive session because much of its discussion included records that are made confidential by statute.

He said since opening of the new building three years ago, the District has had "about the best jail in the country."

Administratively, he said the jail was short of guards, and that it had been necessary to put a man in charge of it who had no similar experience. He said E. Allen Green, jail superintendent, was brought up from an executive position at Lorton Reformatory and "is doing a wonderful job."

McReynolds' statement followed charges by a prisoner, Frank S. Fowler, that he was assaulted by Orman Ewing, another inmate, and that Ewing had a birthday party and other special privileges.

Gas Cache Taken From Lot as OPA Checks on Owner

Seven hundred gallons of gasoline were removed from a vacant lot adjacent to 205 Forest dr., Falls Church, Va., Sunday night as OPA officials were struggling to determine the ownership of the fuel and whether it was legally obtained and owned.

Discovered Sunday afternoon by boys playing on the lot, the entire cache of four 50-gallon drums and 20 25-gallon drums, was unearthed by the Fairfax police. Without authority to remove it until the legality of its possession was established, the police stood guard over it for the night, while OPA officials were notified and mulled over the matter.

During the course of the night the fuel was removed, in an automobile and truck while police were helpless, in the absence of any warrant authorizing them to take any action.

Idaho Kidnaping Suspect Captured

George Robert Catron, 21, wanted for kidnaping, burglary, assault with a dangerous weapon and escape from jail in Idaho, was being held in the Rockville (Md.) Jail yesterday awaiting return to Idaho

Catron was captured early Sunday morning in a hideout near the home of his parents in Dickerson, Md., by FBI special agents and Montgomery County Police.

FBI agents said that Catron is alleged to have burglarized a home in Grangeville, Idaho, early in September and shortly after to have abducted a 14-year-old girl and was arrested with the girl at Midvale, Idaho.

The FBI Baltimore office said that Catron on September 14 stole a .32-caliber pistol from the 80-year-old jailer at the Idaho county jail and severely beat him on the head, making his escape.

City News in Brief

A telephone call to a friend—who is also a Metropolitan Police private—to tell him that she was going to commit suicide and how she wanted her property divided, yesterday thwarted the attempt of Mrs. Dorothy Schmidt, 36, 1804 Wisconsin ave. nw., to end her life.

The policeman, Pvt. Wade B. Riley of the accident investigation unit, immediately turned the telephone over to his wife, instructed her to continue the conversation as long as possible, and then rushed across town from his Cheverly, Md., home to break down the door of the Schmidt house and administer artificial respiration that, according to doctors, saved her life.

Her husband, Herman G. Schmidt, an electrician, suffered a heart attack when he was notified of her attempt and was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment.

Private Riley reported that after his dash across the city, he found the doors and windows bolted. When he broke into the apartment, he found Mrs. Schmidt unconscious with all the gas jets turned on in the kitchen, and a suicide note on a table nearby. After he revived her with first aid, he sent her to Gallinger Hospital where she was reported as "considerably improved" last night.

Reno Divorce Voided

A divorce decree obtained in Reno, Nev., on March 23, 1943, by Peter G. Slevin of Cleveland was declared void yesterday by Justice James M. Proctor of District Court.

Justice Proctor sustained the contention of Dennis Collins, attorney for Mercedes C. Slevin, wife of the defendant, that he had simulated his residence in Nevada for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining a divorce.

Mrs. Slevin, who lives at 2821 14th st. nw., was awarded maintenance of $150 a month for herself and four children.

Painstaking Justice

The United States Court of Appeals went back to the middle ages yesterday to find the perfect touch to finish off the very modern topic of the liability of a person who leaves his car ignition unlocked.

Making a footnote to an earlier opinion, the court said the person who leaves the ignition unlocked may be held negligent in most instances, but not in all.

"A classic illustration of the same general principle," said the court, "is the Bologna ordinance against blood-letting in the streets, which did not make criminals of surgeons." The ordinance was passed in Bologna, Italy, several hundred years ago.

Gas Coupon Charge

Pleading not guilty, Milton Gordon, 43, and Bud Klinkscale, 30, Negroes, were held under $500 bond each yesterday when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of obtaining and possessing counterfeit gas coupons. The case was continued until Friday.

Navy Class to Give Blood

Graduates of the General Ordnance School of the Navy will cap commencements with visits to the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center, 51 Louisiana ave. nw., beginning today. The current class will make donations in three shifts of 25 each: one group at 1:30 p. m. today, the others at 9:15 a. m. and 10:15 a. m. tomorrow.

Air Essay Contest

William A. M. Burden, aviation assistant of the Secretary of Commerce, is offering war bonds of $100, $50 and $25 denominations as prizes for the best three essays written by Washington school children on the aeronautic exhibit in the Department of Commerce Building. School heads have details of the contest which starts February 1.

Verdict Set Aside

Because of the misconduct of a trial jury foreman, Justice Jennings Bailey of District Court set aside yesterday a judgment for $5000 damages obtained by John J. Foreman of 1123 Owen st. nw. for alleged trespass of his home by U. S. Deputy Marshals.

Justice Bailey's action sustained a motion of U. S. Attorney Edward M. Curran, who defended U. S. Marshal John B. Colpoys in the trial, charging that the jury foreman, Keith M. Gaylor of 520 22d st. nw., had denied on preliminary examination that he knew Attorney John J. O'Brien, a defense witness, or that he had ever been served with a civil process.

It was ruled that Gaylor "should not have served upon the jury," since he had been served with processes at least ten times in a domestic relations case and that several of the papers were issued at the instance of O'Brien, attorney for Mrs. Gaylor.

Yule Trees to Burn

About 30,000 unsold Christmas trees are waiting wet and apparently unwanted at the city dump, City Refuse Chief William Xanten said last night. They will be held about a week in case any comers want to claim them for firewood—the dump is located at 42d and Meade sts. ne. Meanwhile, Xanten said not enough labor showed up for work yesterday to man extra trucks to be used in carting away dismantled Christmas trees from alleys. Regular trash collectors will pick up small trees, but five special trucks will handle the large ones, Xanten said.

OPA Case Dismissed

Mrs. Ida Grant and Mrs. Bloomah Grant, proprietors of J. B. Spund's Market, 3425 Connecticut ave. nw., were found innocent in Municipal Court yesterday of violating the OPA ceiling price regulations in the sale of 3 pounds of bananas and 1 pound of onions.

Benjamin Vernon of Chevy Chase, Md., testified he bought the bananas and onions above the ceilings at the market on December 13 but was unable to give exact details. Judge Armond Scott dismissed the charges for lack of evidence.

Fewer Dogs Destroyed

With rabies reports at a minimum the past few weeks, Pound Master Frank W. Marks said yesterday more persons are redeeming their dogs, and the Pound is destroying fewer of them. He said many still are observing the muzzling regulation and pointed out that it remains in force until January 24. "We are busy," he said, but are not picking up so many strays as earlier this winter.

Gin, Whisky Stolen

More than 900 bottles of gin and whiskies were reported stolen yesterday from the basement of Carroll's Tavern, 510 9th st. nw., Max S. Bricker, owner, of 1530 16th st. nw., said that thieves apparently broke through the basement door. He estimated his loss at $2,020.41.

Ewing Files Suit

Ormond W. Ewing, former Utah political figure now serving 8 to 24 years' imprisonment for rape, filed a countersuit in District Court yesterday against Attorney James J. Laughlin for $1,500,000 damages.

Laughlin previously had asked Ewing to pay $7500 in attorney's fees and now represents District Jail Inmate Frank S. Fowler, who caused an investigation of the jail by charging Ewing enjoyed special privileges. Ewing now contends Laughlin libeled him.

The countersuit, filed through Attorney Robert Escher charges Laughlin sold a $2300 note entrusted to him. Ewing also alleges Laughlin is causing him to be annoyed at District Jail by "inspiring" jail inmates to harass him. Laughlin yesterday denied the charges and said he would file an answer at the proper time.

More Lingerie Found

The Twelfth Precinct Station has begun to take on the aspects of a lingerie bargain basement as another batch of unclaimed feminine unmentionables, of all sizes, shapes and colors, was turned in yesterday.

The second discovery of lacy items in that area in as many days, the new batch included six pairs of stepins, a pink house dress and a white silk night gown found rain-sodden in the yard of Mrs. Pany Carbon, of 3727 26th st. ne. In the same manner, Charles H. Hospital, of 3500 15th st. ne., had found 38 pairs of sheer stepins scattered about his backyard Sunday.

Pvt. James G. Beach, who became the unofficial lingerie expert of the precinct a few weeks ago with discovery of discarded women's underwear in woods off Eastern ave., is meanwhile seeking a 12-year-old boy, who was seen in the vicinity of the Hospital home Sunday and was seen bicycling away from the Carbon residence when the second collection of clothing was discovered.

Held for Grand Jury

Mrs. Lorraine Gardner, 32, Negro, was held under $3000 bond yesterday for grand jury action on a charge of setting fire to an apartment at 601 3rd st. ne., where she resides, last Sunday.

Judge Quits Maghan Case

Denying charges he was biased, Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn in Municipal Court yesterday disqualified himself as judge in the case of Robert J. Maghan, suspended policeman charged with being drunk.

Judge Quinn's statement was: "Preliminary motions having been disposed of in the case and reconsidering the affidavit of bias and prejudice and considering the affidavit filed in Municipal Court of Appeals and which, incidentally, was never presented to this judge for consideration, and knowing said charges to be absolutely baseless, this judge hereby disqualifies himself from any further participation in the case."

Judge Quinn had denied a motion by Maghan's attorney that the information on which the arrest was made be quashed and Maghan then filed an affidavit saying the judge had certain conversations indicating he was prejudiced.

'King David' Rehearsal

The first rehearsal of Honegger's "King David," by the Washington Choral Society, will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in Central High School, 13th and Clifton sts. nw. It will be presented for the first time in Washington March 14 in Constitution Hall by the Choral Society, directed by Louis Potter.

Dupont Circle Citizens Favor D. C. Garages

The Dupont Circle Citizens' Association favored last night the proposal for the District to erect a series of garages to remove automobiles from the streets and at the same time establish playgrounds on the roofs to combat child delinquency. The discussions were held at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Woman, 93, Fatally Hurt By Trolley

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 1
Deaths this date last year .. 1
District total last year 97

The District's first traffic fatality of the year, a 93-year-old woman who died Sunday from injuries received November 25, involved a Capital Transit Co. street car operator who last month was absolved of blame in another traffic death, police said yesterday.

The victim was Dr. Emily E. Bateman of 2305 Washington circle nw., whose death at Gallinger Hospital, police said, was a result of injuries received when she was struck by a streetcar while crossing in the 2000 block of 14th st. nw.

Operator of the car was listed as James M. Royster, 39, of 1423 Sheridan st. nw., a motorman of seven months' experience, who also operated the streetcar which fatally struck Anthony Mares, 83, of 4017 14th st. nw., on December 16 in the 4000 block of 14th st. nw. A coroner's jury later termed Mares' death accidental. Royster is still employed by Capital Transit.

No date has been set as yet for an inquest into the death of Dr. Bateman.

Meanwhile, three persons were admitted to local hospitals yesterday with injuries received in two automobile accidents.

Master Sergt. Michael J. Siconlis, 25, of Rochester, N. Y., attached to the Army Air Forces was treated at Georgetown Hospital for chest and internal injuries after the car he was driving struck a streetcar loading zone and then a light pole at 34th st. and Wisconsin ave. nw. Siconlis was later transferred to Walter Reed Hospital in an undetermined condition.

After the car in which they were passengers collided with another vehicle in the 1500 block of Massachusetts ave. nw., Mary Kachalova, 25, of 2124 P st. nw., and Mary Filina, 25, of 1320 Harvard st. nw., were admitted to Emergency Hospital with leg injuries.

The car in which the pair were riding was operated by Nikolai Kalbasnikov, 34, of 3217 Connecticut ave. nw., while the driver of the other car was John W. Bramhan, 34, of 1421 Massachusetts ave. nw., according to police.

11 Indictments Found Against 'Talent Scout'

Arnold Lester, 43, who virtually got the keys to Washington by claiming he was a "Hollywood talent scout," was indicted yesterday on 11 charges of false pretenses and violation of the National Stolen Property Act in the cashing of $735 worth of bad checks he used to live on at the Statler Hotel, and to entertain at night clubs.

Lester, also known as Fost Smith and by a dozen other names, was said to have reserved rooms for Hollywood movie stars he pretended to represent and to put the chorus girls of "Sons o' Fun" in a flutter with offers of spurious movie contracts.

These indictments were among 35 of a local nature returned befor Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court.

Joseph H. Haskins, 32, Negro, was charged with posing as a "marrying minister" and collecting fees for two weddings he performed.

Edward E. O'Bryhim, 19, of 210 12th st. sw., was charged with arson in starting a fire in the Department of Agriculture Building, where he was an employe. Police said he was discovered while starting a fire in a waste-paper basket of one room while firemen were going to a fire in another room.

LeRoy Adams, 34, and Robert H. Johnson, 42, Negroes, both of 419 N st. sw., were charged with the larceny and embezzlement of more than 1400 gallons of gasoline which, police said, they sold to customers at a filling station after disconnecting the meter.

Mrs. Lai Ping Chew Lee, 39, of 4121 9th st. nw., the mother of 10 children, was charged with forging four money orders worth $325.

Other indictments were:

Assault with dangerous weapon—Eugene Shealey, 30, Negro, 1435 W st. nw.

Grand larceny—Thomas W. Moroney, 20, address given as the Roger Smith Hotel; William J. Mamakos, 31, 715 H st. nw.; Charles P. McClain, 20, Negro, 1715 1st st. nw.; Wendal Plumber, 25, Negro, 120 S st. n.w; Clarence Kinzer, 25, Negro, 919 W st. nw., and Clinton G. Johnson, 28, 1928 6th st. nw.

Housebreaking and larceny—Clarence Kinzer, William Miller, 18, Negro; James A. Simpson, 18, Negro; William M. Briggs, 18, Negro, all of 520 21st st. nw.; Randolph Valentine, 16, Negro, 440 O st. nw.; James Caroline, 16, Negro, 604 I st. nw. (Juvenile Court waived jurisdiction), and Matthew McIntosh, 18, Negro, Georgia ave. and Graham pl. nw.

Robbery—Willie Ritter, 27, Negro, 37 Fenton st. ne., and William Anthony and Luchis McClinton, 38, Negro, no fixed address.

Violation of Harrison Narcotic Act and Narcotic Drugs Import and Export Act and nonsupport of minor children—Joseph H. Nelson, 33, Negro, 613 L st. ne.

Forgery and uttering—Eddie B. Donaldson, 20, Negro, 762 Hobart st. nw.

Violation of District gambling laws—Frances Howard, 41, Negro, 61 G st. sw.; David Shepherd, 41, Negro, 692 4th st. ne.; Lorenzo T. Howard, 61, Negro, 629 3½ st. ne.; Lucille A. Wood, 35, Negro, 696 4th st. ne., and Clifford M. Wood, 39, Negro.

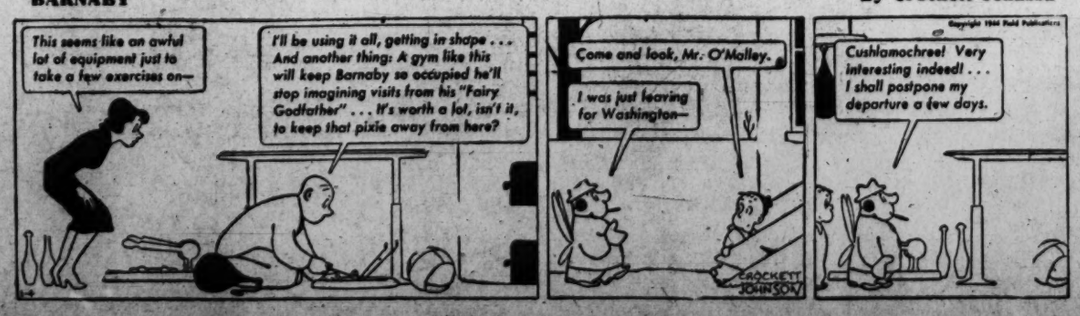
Blood Donors Set 392 Appointments On First 1944 Day

The District Blood Donor Center of the American Red Cross made appointments for 392 donations on the first day of operation in the new year—a favorable Monday record which indicated that it will reach its new increased weekly quota of 3500 pints, it was said last night.

Donald M. Nelson, head of the War Production Board, was this year's first donor. He was followed by Mrs. Raymond Clapper, wife of the newspaper columnist, who gave her second contribution at the Blood Donor Center, 51 Louisiana ave. nw., and many other donors.

BARNABY

By Crockett Johnson



This seems like an awful lot of equipment just to take a few exercises on—
I'll be using it all, getting in shape . . . And another thing: A gym like this will keep Barnaby so occupied he'll stop imagining visits from his "Fairy Godfather" . . . It's worth a lot, isn't it, to keep that pixie away from here?
Come and look, Mr. O'Malley.
I was just leaving for Washington—
Cushlamochree! Very interesting indeed! . . . I shall postpone my departure a few days.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Otherwise Happy Marriage, Based on Deep Love, Is Spoiled for Wife by Husband's Humiliating Habit of Flirting Promiscuously; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the young wife of an Army Captain stationed in this country. I hold several degrees from colleges and universities and am considered extremely attractive. My husband and I are deeply in love with each other. We have been married three years. My husband enjoys innocent and mild flirtations with other young women. This has been a habit with him ever since we were married. He carries on these various flirtations before my very eyes, but never for long periods of time with the same person.

On occasion, I have been annoyed by this habit and have reproached him for it; whereupon he got angry and denied he was flirting. Also, if I laugh at his actions, he gets angry, too. Must I sit by and play the role of mousey, well-bred wife, while seeing him constantly flirting with women much less attractive than I, who interest him at the moment? Once I tried to seek revenge by the same method. But he is insanely jealous of me and caused such a scene that I resolved never to try it again.

Our mutual friends have observed his conduct and think I am silly to stand for it. How much longer must I pretend to them that it is just a joke that doesn't bother me in the slightest? BETH.

What Friends Think Is a Minor Matter

DEAR BETH: Get this fact firmly in mind: What your friends think of your husband's actions and your reactions thereto is not the factor of first importance to be considered, in tackling the very serious problem he has precipitated by his insect (i. e., male butterfly) behavior. Your first concern, and his, should be with the damage he is doing to your marriage and your alleged deep love for each other, by his habitual, lightly lascivious public manifestations of spiritual disloyalty to you—a performance which, in all its implications, is cruelly and insultingly destructive to your self-respect; and, likewise, progressively deprives you of reason to respect his character or attach any sacrosanct significance to such loverlike attentions as he may see fit to bestow upon you, in the privacy of your own home.

His behavior has one crucial implication, namely: His casual, indiscriminate questing after flirtatious thrills probably is a direct reflection of a primarily sensual nature. And it is probable that your attraction for each other is largely "sex appeal"—with insufficient past or present interest in, or emphasis upon, intellectual and spiritual areas of kinship. Which causes one to wonder whether he latently possesses enough, in variety and kind, of the stuff of civilized personality to be amenable to "forced growth" in the direction of psychological maturity of viewpoint and conduct. And, also, whether you are qualified, psychologically and spiritually, to guide and propel him along that road—by steadfastly, uncompromisingly and with warm conviction making known to him your ideas of what constitutes minimum standards of praiseworthy married behavior.

Close In on Problem; Take Bull by Horns

HOWEVER, nothing ventured, nothing gained. So my advice is: Stop beating about the bush and walking on eggs, with reference to the vital grievance his misconduct constitutes. Close in on the problem. Take the bull by the horns. The next time he deals you exceeding mortification, read him the riot act when you get him behind closed doors at home. Give him a from-first-to-last bill of particulars on your general Cause for Complaint. Meet his defensive surge of guilt-conscious anger with a rocklike display of white-heat indignation, softly and deliberately voiced, that demands to be heard; that will not be evaded, nor confused, nor bluffed into abashed apology or retreat. Tell him this is not jealousy speaking; but simon-pure disgust with a performance on his part that dishonors both of you; and that has reached the final-straw stage where, if longer continued, it surely means the death of your respect for him and a ruined marriage. And then ask him coolly to make up his mind what he wants to do,—cut out the foolishness and behave as he should; or go on playing Lothario and reap the consequences. M. H.

'Expectantly Yours...' Is Brand New Summary of Latest Scientific Ideas

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

There is nothing particularly new about having babies, and quite a number of books have been written for the expectant mother.

While nature doesn't change, obstetrician's and pediatrician's opinions do. It is well to have a brand new 1943 summary of all the latest scientific ideas—so here is Dr. Mario A. Costello of Philadelphia, with "Expectantly Yours: A Book for Expectant Mothers and Prospective Fathers," published by MacMillan Co., New York.

I am not sure that knowing all about it makes pregnancy and childbirth any easier, but in the language of the circus barker—"You can't tell what's going on without a program." I suppose that's justification enough for such treaties.

Dr. Costello emphasizes the things in which the woman really needs direction—exercise, clothes, food, during the expectant period, nursing, the comeback after the event, leaving the gruesome details of the actual procedure to a sort of "What you don't know, won't hurt you" chapter.

For comment, I prefer to abstract what he says about the factors and procedures that the mother carries on when she is conscious and cooperating with the doctor.

Diet During Pregnancy

The expectant mother hears over and over again, "Do have another helping. You are eating for two now." Dr. Costello does not approve. "You are eating for just one—yourself," he says to her, and the scientific answer is:

"Observations made in Germany during the first World War showed the weight of the offspring cannot be influenced by the amount and character of the diet, except in the case of a diet markedly lacking in vitamins.

"Inactivity probably increases the weight of the child more than meals, providing those meals are sensibly balanced. The prospective mother can sit for two, but not eat for two."

Twice a week, or every other day, before the baby comes, regular meals are discontinued. Instead there is one glass of milk and one cracker at 8 a. m., 11 a. m., 2 p. m., 5 p. m. and 8 p. m. Two oranges are allowed during the day, one green vegetable and a cup of coffee substitute.

New Meal Schedule

Here's a new one on me, too. "Some baby doctors direct mothers not to feed baby until he asks for it, regardless of the hour. He'll set his own schedule, these pediatricians say. It's a new idea and whether you follow it will depend on your particular baby doctor's theories."

There is a good chapter on how to regain the old figure after it's all over, called "The Comeback."

In spite of the title, little advice is given the prospective father, although the doctor does shatter one hallowed tradition. He thinks the father should spend the expectant period not in the corner saloon or at his club, as has been the honored custom, but at home being kind to his wife. The world rolls on!

Reading Directions Will Save Energy, Materials

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The woman at home is in the front line of the conservation drive. But she often wastes a lot of efforts—spoiling rather than conserving the very thing she's working on.

Know why? Because she doesn't read directions carefully on the bottles and jars of cleaning agents, forgetting that these directions are written with regard for the laws of physics and chemistry and we can't ignore them and expect good results. The same goes for many home-made cleaning mixtures. Actually the prepared compounds used according to directions are probably the most satisfactory.

For home dry-cleaning a benzine type of cleaning fluid is the most generally available. Since it is inflammable it should be used with great caution (not near gas stove or gas refrigerator with pilots for instance.) For spotting, the non-inflammable carbon tetrochloride is safer and highly satisfactory.

For upholstery and rugs, the foamy chemical commercial cleaner made for the purpose is recommended by many experts. The trouble with soapsuds is that they're too apt to saturate and rot the fabric. They will work if you have facilities for proper rinsing and drying. Special household cleaners for paint surfaces, parchment shades, windows and blinds will usually do a better job than plain soapsuds, however.

For silver a good cleaning and polishing followed by a preservative preparation will keep silver (which is not in frequent use) looking bright sometimes for months. Brass, after being well cleaned, will stay bright longer if coated with wax.

Soap and soap flakes, nevertheless, are generally the most constantly satisfactory of all cleaners for many purposes. And plain wax of good quality is a marvelous preservative, especially for window sills, door facings, paper or parchment lamp shades.

Fitness Program Will Bring Zest For Living and Normalize Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

(This is the first in a series of articles by Ida Jean Kain to help you get in trim. Watch this page, during the next three weeks, for her suggestions, diets and special exercises for every figure problem. Her program will step up your pep and zest for living.)

If all the reducing resolutions were laid end to end, they would parallel the excess waistline inches. Resolutions come and go and waistlines go with them!

This is the time you set to do something about your figure. But instead of stressing reducing, let's make it fitness.

It will give you back your old drive and zip. It will also nip in your waist, slim down your hips and straighten you out.

You are healthier at the weight that is normal for your structure. Too little weight means low resistance and jumpy nerves. Too much is a drag and depletes your energy. Whether it means gaining or reducing, bring your weight to normal. Don't try to be super-streamlined. You can't afford to be!

But before we start anything, maybe you have a question . . . Which is more reducing, diet or exercise? Diet. It is the only thing that will fix your weight. Will it reduce your hips? No. If you want to alter your measurements, you have to exercise.

What is fat? It is stored calories. To be exact, each pound represents 4320 calories you didn't need. But the excess fat does not represent stored health. It doesn't give you reserve of protein, minerals and vitamins. That's why you can't just cut calories right and left. You have to choose your calories from the protective foods.

If you are too thin, don't just eat more cake, pie and ice cream to gain weight. You need nutrients in order to assimilate your food. Besides, it isn't just fat you want to pile on your bones. You want a healthier nervous system and more endurance. The right kind of food helps you to have them.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is possible that young parents of little experience may be less cautious than grandparents who have been brought up with different ideas, or have had unhappy experiences to confirm them in these ideas.

But both should take it for granted that children will and do adapt themselves to minor differences in treatment.

One grandmother writes:

"Should any iced drink be given a child nearly two years of age? I am thinking particularly of cod liver oil which makes her choke when cold.

"What solid foods is a child this age supposed to receive? Is it harmful if the child is fed swiftly?"

I believe that cold cod liver oil is easier to swallow than warm oil which may taste somewhat fishy. In such a small amount as a teaspoonful the coldness of the fluid wouldn't be harmful. Large portions of icy fluid might be a shock to the child's stomach. Perhaps dividing the oil into half-teaspoon amounts would prevent the choking. That could be dangerous if oil were forced into the lungs.

A child of this age has a large and varied diet of almost all fruits and vegetables, beef, liver, lamb, chicken, turkey, most simple deserts such as sponge cake, angel cake, cookies, also gelatines, custards, junkets, puddings in addition to cottage cheese, eggs, milk, cocoa, butter, breads, etc.

Eating too rapidly, if the child chews and digests well, is not harmful. It merely deprives the child of the opportunity to develop an enjoyment for the ceremony of the meal.

For our leaflet, "Diet for Children One to Two Years of Age," send your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post with a 3-cent stamped, self addressed envelope.

Greater Personal Sacrifices Predicted for Women

By Ann Cottrell

The year 1944 will require greater personal sacrifice from women in the military services, on the production line, and in the home, women's leaders in the Nation's Capital stressed in special New Year's statements for the New York Herald Tribune.

Directors of three of the women's military services—WAVES, SPARS and Marines—pointed out the need for their members to carry on with their jobs until the peace comes. Looking further than the peace, Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department, expressed hope that women's skills will be utilized in the post-war period.

Calling 1944 the most crucial in history, Representative Margaret Chase Smith (Republican) of Maine, urged women to participate more actively in the war. Mrs. Smith, the only woman member of Congress, was at her desk on New Year's Eve and even answered the phone herself because she had given her secretaries a holiday. She said that women on any front—home, military or production—can serve best "by ignoring rumors, demanding facts and making others more conscious of the value of citizenship and the right to vote."

Capt. Mildred A. McAfee, director of the WAVES, expressed hope that the 27,000 members of the reserve "will continue to perform in 1944 their tasks in the fine spirit of service and high standards which have marked the past year, so that the men of our Navy fighting at sea may be secure in the knowledge that the WAVES are doing their shore jobs at home efficiently and well."

Lieut. Col. Ruth Cheney Streeter, director of the Women's Reserve of the Marines, forecast "the coming year is not one in which men and women can afford to spare themselves. What if they do wear themselves out a little quicker than might otherwise be the case?

"What could they do with the remainder of their lives that would be more important than taking their share in bringing this war to a quick and victorious conclusion?"

Lieut. Comdr. Dorothy C. Stratton, director of the Women's Reserve of the Coast Guard, told the New York Herald Tribune "the event of a new year finds every SPAR with one common resolution—to spare no personal effort to help bring about the complete victory for which our brothers are fighting." In 1944, she said, "we will have to work harder than before, but we will stay with our assignments until they are done, until the war is over and our service."

Concerning the future employment of women, Miss Anderson stated: "All-out planning for peace commensurate with the vast blueprints for war will create a demand for the services of all—both men and women—in search of employment."

Department Stores Lure Women With Flowers, Free Classes

By Vivian Brown
Associated Press Writer

New York.—Mom gave Santa Claus a hand this year behind the counters.

For a while the holiday help shortage looked critical. Younger girls were leaving in droves to go into the service, marry or take defense jobs. But the department stores sent out a frantic call to mothers—and the response hasn't been disappointing.

At one of the largest department stores, where 10,000 additional help were needed for the holiday season, practically every inducement except company stock was offered.

The interview room has shed its straight-back chairs and faded drapes. It is now replete with lounging chairs, plush carpet, wood carvings, crystal lamps and paintings swiped from the limited stock of the furniture department.

If you even whisper the word employment, or the newspaper under your arm is turned to the want ad section when you enter the store, you are pounced upon by a guard—and just try to get away!

A hostess awaits in the palatial reception room, keeps you amused during the waiting period and dispenses free cigarettes. At no extra charge, you can smell $9-a-dozen chrysanthemums.

After landing the job, you really start to live. Besides a glee club, there are classes in modern dancing, interior decorating and make-up. Free dinner is provided for overtime workers.

Large department stores are offering bonuses to employes recommending a successful applicant who remains during the holiday season. Macy's bonus is $2.50 in war savings stamps, Hearns' $3 and Bloomingdale's $5.

In one store, where a little old lady was hired, the floorwalker observed that each evening a dignified old gentleman stopped at her counter to add her sales book and escort her home.

Full-page newspaper advertisements, radio, billboards, subway cards and door-to-door canvassing with the aid of Boy Scouts are a few of the methods used to send an employment message to the housewife.

So, if some day while you're bending over the washing machine or pinning down baby's bib, your radio should sing out "We'll be down to get you in a taxi, honey"—better get dressed, woman, you're been hired!

Weddings

St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral yesterday was the scene of the wedding of Ensign Christine Dora Grunewald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Grunewald, and Lieut. (j.g.) Jay Stanley Hartzell, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hartzell of Philadelphia, Pa. Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Parish, officiated at the 8:30 evening ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin, having laid aside her WAVE uniform for the occasion. Her long veil was held to her hair with a coronet of pearls and she carried white roses and orchids.

Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Erna Ida Grunewald, and the bridesmaids were Miss Jean Hartzell, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Geraldine Hubbard of New York, Miss Carolyn Small of Elizabeth City, N. C.; Ensign Virginia McDonough of Louisville, Ky., and Ensign Dorothy Thompson of Indianapolis, Ind.

The brother of the bridegroom, Thomas Hartzell, just back from Italy and on leave from Valley Forge Hospital, was the best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Harvey Nyland, USN; Lieut. Charles B. Umland, USN; Lieut. (j. g.) Herman Bloom, USN; Lieut. William Thomas Westmoreland, USMC, and Capt. John Hogan, USMC.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents in the Westchester.

The bride was graduated from the National Cathedral School and Duke University and has been in the Navy since last September. She is on duty at the Navy Department here.

Lieutenant Hartzell was graduated from William Penn Charter School and Duke University. He has been in the Navy since July, 1941, and has just returned from a long cruise.

Bravo—Hobart

Taking a few days' leave from his naval station, Ensign Robert Barrett Bravo, formerly of Washington, journeyed to Troy, Ohio, to wed Miss Lucia Gray Hobart last evening.

Mrs. Bravo is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison Hobart of Troy, Ohio. Ensign Bravo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hylton Logan Bravo of Washington.

The ceremony was performed at the Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. A. W. Cooke officiating. Attired in a white velvet gown of medieval design, and carrying white orchids, the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Ann Thompson of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Barbara West, Miss Harriet Lindenberger, Miss Clara Congdon and Miss Mary Dunlop. Best man was Nathaniel H. Luttrell and serving as ushers were Corpl. Albert Hastorf 3d, Lieut. Burton L. West, Ensign Robert R. Douglas and Ensign Allen Linn.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The couple will make their home at Kokomo, Ind. Mrs. Bravo is a graduate of Smith College and her husband attended Amherst College before entering the service.

Boys in C-B-I Theater Dedicate 1944 to Victory

No matter what Washington may expect to put into or get out of the new year, the boys in the China-Burma-India theater have made up their minds to aim high for 1944.

According to their official newspaper, the China - Burma - India Roundup, the boys gave themselves a Christmas present. They promised themselves that from now until the echo of the last angry shot they would give, unstintingly, every full ounce of their energy and devotion to tasks which they are called upon to perform. Extending greetings to all members of the command, they expressed the hope that Christmas of 1944 would be observed at home, following the enemy's capitulation.

Informal Tea Is Given By Navy Family

Lieut. Comdr. John Grace, jr., and his family—Mrs. Grace and daughter, Katherine, are a unit of warworkers.

Commander Grace joined up for services shortly after Pearl Harbor. Mrs. Grace, who as Frances Coates Grace, is well known as a solo opera singer, now sings for the servicemen at the Stage Door Canteen, the Naval Hospital at Bethesda; Miss Katherine Grace is a regular attendant at the Stage Door Canteen when she's home from Vassar.

Yesterday afternoon Commander and Mrs. Grace gave a very simple informal tea to greet their friends for the new year with their daughter receiving with them.

Also assisting were Mrs. Claude Jones, wife of Admiral Jones; Mrs. David Sellers, wife of Admiral Sellers; Mrs. Stuart Godfrey, wife of General Godfery; Mrs. Homer Cummings, Mrs. Leon B. Scott, wife of Captain Scott; Mrs. M. K. Tate, Mrs. C. B. Mickelwait, Mrs. Wendell Berge, Mrs. Otis Swainson, Mrs. Edwin Dickinson and Mrs. Curtis Mitchell.

Mrs. Grace and her daughter helped to entertain the boys at the Stage Door Canteen both Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve and Mrs. Grace gave a concert for the ward patients at Naval Hospital on December 21. Miss Grace will leave tomorrow to return to her studies at Vassar. She spent several days at West Point for the winter festivities of "plebe" week at the United States Military Academy.

Another fete on the calendar yesterday was the luncheon given by Mrs. G. M. W. Koning Hamilton at the Shoreham Hotel when Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, was the ranking guest. Mrs. Hamilton served as general chairman of the recent United Nations Bazaar. Other guests were wives of members of the embassy staff and included Mme. Meijer Ranneft, Mme. Weijerman, Mme. Reuchlin, Mme. Daubanton, Mme. van Houten, Mme. van Vredenburch, Mme. Boon, Mme. Peters and Mme. Adams.

Wife of New Marine Commandant Popular Member of Capital Officialdom; Has 'Kept House' in Many Far-Flung Posts; Patiently Awaits Move to New Official Home

MRS. A. A. VANDEGRIFT

PATIENCE—learned of anxious waiting for word from her husband on the fighting front in recent years, and from combating housing difficulties in many far-flung areas—is a virtue Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift cultivated long ago . . . and one for which she is finding special use now.

At a time when many an official hostess would be more than eager to get settled in her new home, the wife of the new Leatherneck leader is more than willing to bide her time . . . and let redecoration run its usual, slow-paced course of wartime. In other words, she hasn't "any idea" when the commandant's house at Marine Barracks will be ready for her and General Vandegrift, and she's not worrying about it. Before they move in, the place will be done over, from basement to attic—for the first time since before Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb moved in some seven years ago. The Holcombs, by the way, packed up their lares and penates and had them hauled out of the commandant's house before Christmas. Mrs. Holcomb is now in Florida, where she has taken a house for several months. The General, currently registered at a local hotel, plans to join her there later. Chances are, late spring will find both of them back at Rose Croft, their summer home in St. Marys, Md.

VIRGINIA-BORN Mrs. Vandegrift is well prepared to make decorating suggestions in regard to her next home. When her only son, Maj. A. A. Vandegrift, jr., was studying at Virginia Military Institute she enrolled for a course in interior decorating in a nearby college. Since then, as a Marine officer's hostess in many parts of the world, including Haiti, Panama and China, she has collected furnishings that have long made her Washington residence one of the most beautifully appointed in the entire city.

I'll never forget the day I met Mrs. Vandegrift. She happened to be lunching in the Press Club dining room with one of my friends and arrangements being what they are at that spot, the place was so crowded that some of us who could not find a table were asked to join the group gathered around Mrs. Vandegrift. That happened to be at the time of the invasion of Guadalcanal. Latest reports from the Pacific areas rippled around the Press Club dining room in ominous tones. Somebody at the table who evidently didn't realize Mrs. Vandegrift's husband was leading the invasion, observed that it might turn out to be another Dunkirk. Somebody else added that latest reports were extremely unfavorable.

Mrs. Vandegrift listened intently, her brown eyes fixed on each person who spoke. "I believe," she observed finally, in a serene tone, "that our forces will hold at Guadalcanal.

SOMEHOW, the conviction in her voice impressed us all on that dark, dark day. It had something of the same effect that a letter from her husband to her—a letter written from the Solomons in a lull between battles and later published—had on many other Americans. In the gloomiest period of the invasion, General Vandegrift was optimistically looking forward to the time when he would return to America to be with his wife again. Faith of that type and in such trying times is something many Americans need now.

The former Mildred Strode of Amherst, Va., met young Alexander A. Vandegrift shortly after he was graduated from the University of Virginia and they were married soon afterward. During most of his 34-year fighting career, she has been with him; other times, she has been a patiently waiting, but not idle, wife on the home front. During those dreary days when reports from the Solomons were anything but encouraging, she managed to keep busy; to gather around her and to work with other Marine wives; and to instill in them the same courage she herself consistently displayed. At that time she termed herself "just another waiting wife"—but she obviously was a wife determined to keep the home fires burning brightly for a husband and a son who, she had faith, would one day return.

A great and gracious woman, Mrs. Vandegrift. I'm glad she's the new "First Lady of the Marines."

He is the grandson of the late Rear Admiral and Mrs. George H. Wadleigh and the late Rear Admiral and Mrs. George C. Remey. Since his graduation from Harvard he has been on active duty at sea.

Mothers Ask More Cloth For Sewing

By the Associated Press

The needle and thread brigade complained loudly yesterday that (a) There's not enough clothing around to keep the children warm; (b) what there is isn't good enough to make sewing repairs worth while.

The protest was voiced through the American Home Economics Association by housewives interviewed by the association in 25 States. The survey indicated:

Shortages are most critical in clothing for children under 15 years of age; underwear, elastic and panty waists are in great need.

Yard goods has depreciated in quality—"women are willing to sew but can find no outing flannel . . . yard goods is so poor that it isn't worth the time to make up."

In the wintry northern tier of States, boys overalls, long underwear, stockings and heavy coats are needed.

Some women said that materials now stand few launderings and sizing is "less dependable" than normally. One reported she bought size 16 pajamas for her son who usually wore size 12 and they shrank to the point where the sleeves played tag with the elbows.

The survey was prompted by an appeal from 75 women of the Minneapolis and St. Paul area who wrote to OPA and other Federal agencies, urging remedial action. They added:

"We recognize that there are many inconveniences we must endure due to war needs. However, when such inconsistencies exist as a profusion of luxury items such as $30 blouses alongside a dearth of essential items, something should be done."

Rayon Hosiery Pricing Rules Revised; Some Reductions

By Christine Sadler

Over-all revision of the pricing regulations for women's rayon hosiery was announced yesterday by the Office of Price Administration with some increases permitted and some rollbacks ordered.

Prices paid by "consumers as a whole," however, will remain the same on an average, OPA said. They go into effect January 15.

Lower-priced plain knit hosiery will be raised from 1 to 7 cents per pair in some makes, to restore the merchandise to the markets in greater quantities.

Other changes specified included:

1. Separate ceilings for branded and unbranded full-fashioned hosiery.

2. An increase in the wholesaler's mark-up by about 2 per cent on full-fashioned hosiery and slightly over 1 per cent on circular knit.

3. Elimination of separate ceilings for "so-called Grade A and Grade B" hosiery. This follows abolishment in August of the requirement for grade labeling in the industry.

4. Unfinished stockings, formerly without ceilings, were brought under dollar and cents price control "to correct chaotic conditions in the hosiery gray goods market."

As an illustration of what the new regulation would mean, OPA cited the 45-gauge plain knit full-fashioned rayon stocking, which it declared to be the type most commonly sold. For unbranded stockings of this make, the price remains 81 cents a pair when sold in mail order houses and chain stores. All other retailers, which formerly had a ceiling of 92 cents for this make, will have a ceiling of 90 cents when bought direct from manufacturers and 96 cents when bought from wholesalers.

Appeal Board Will Sift Deferments

Beginning January 10, the District Appeal Board will start reviewing all occupational draft deferments granted by local boards in other areas to registrants employed in Washington, District headquarters announced yesterday.

The move is in compliance with new draft legislation passed last month.

Heretofore, the local Appeal Board has acted only in cases where registrants with outside boards have appealed from 1-A classifications. Under the new measure, cases of those deferred on grounds of hardship, conscientious objection to military service and other reasons will be handled.

In considering occupational deferments, the Appeal Board will consider whether an applicant is a prewar father, a spokesman said.

After completing reviews of all deferments granted by outside boards the Appeal Board then will begin work on new deferments.

Purely Personal

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senora de Martins, with their daughters, Anna Maria and Nora, returned yesterday to the embassy from Miami, where they spent the holidays following their return to the United States from Brazil.

Hitler's Trial, Death for War Crimes Urged

Copyright, 1944, New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 3.—Gen. Marcell de Baer of Belgium, chairman of the United Nations Commission for Investigation of War Crimes, outlined today the methods by which Nazi and Fascist war criminals, including Adolf Hitler, could be brought to book after the war.

De Baer believes Hitler himself should be tried for specific crimes under existing law by an international tribunal, that his book "Mein Kampf" would serve as strong supporting evidence against him, and that his sentence should be death.

Atrocities Yet to Come

He warned that atrocities committed by the Nazis so far, unspeakable as they have been, are nothing compared to what is yet to come in the occupied countries.

"From information I have received from Europe," he said, "I am convinced the Germans will carry out their threat to scorch the earth as they retreat."

He said there should be no delay whatsoever among the United Nations in compiling the names and data concerning war criminals, and that these should be collated for legal process so the trials can begin just as soon as hostilities cease.

In deploring suggestions that Nazi war criminals be left to "decent Germans" for trial and punishment, he said the "Germans ascribe generosity to weakness and they must learn that crime does not pay; punishment is part of that education."

Atrocity Sufferers

He likewise viewed as dangerous a suggestion that the peoples of the occupied countries who have suffered from German war atrocities be permitted to take retribution. That would merely cause chaos, he said.

De Baer said the problem of asylum was a difficult one, and that where neutral countries provided asylum to war criminals sanctions should be applied by the United Nations.

The Belgian jurist said Goebbels and Hitler had acquired estates in Switzerland, and he indicated a belief that they expect to flee to that country when the worst happens.

Of the recent Karkhov trials in Russia, when Germans were executed for war atrocities, he said:

"They have given the Germans a serious warning that this time we mean business. But I wonder if it might not have been better to hold them after the war."

Expires Friday

CIO Confers On Telegraph Contract

A "national emergency conference" of the American Communications Association, CIO, has been called at the Annapolis Hotel for tomorrow.

A Nation-wide CIO contract covering, according to the union, "15,000 workers of the former Postal Telegraph Co. now employed by the Western Union" will expire Friday.

Joseph F. Selly, union president, yesterday "warned that failure of the National War Labor Board to issue an immediate order for extension of this contract would inevitably result in the development of a chaotic and intolerable situation in the telegraph industry."

The National Labor Relations Board has been holding hearings in the case to determine employes' representative after the Postal Telegraph-Western Union merger. An NLRB spokesman yesterday said that these hearings cannot be expected to be concluded before the CIO contract expires. In a letter to WLB Chairman William N. Davis, FCC Chairman James L. Fly urged continuance of the contract "to maintain continuity of service." No decision was made by the WLB after hearing both sides of the dispute last Thursday.

Market Receipts Of Hogs Hit 19-Year Peak

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—More pork-on-the-hoof was crammed in mid-Western livestock pens today than at any other time in the past 19 years.

All previous highs established in the current heavy marketing of hogs were shattered when farmers unloaded 241,000 head at the principal livestock terminals of the corn belt. This was the largest single day's receipts since January 5, 1925, when 277,000 hogs arrived.

Facilities of meat packing plants were unable to cope with the huge outpouring of porkers. Thousands of head went unsold and will be offered later this week.

In Chicago, beginning early Sunday afternoon, trucks loaded with hogs started to line streets outside the stockyards. The police force called in extra men to handle the traffic jam.

PUC Asked To Order Cut In Transit Rate

A determined effort to gain lower transportation costs for the Washington metropolitan area received new impetus yesterday when the Public Utilities Commission was requested to order "immediately" a reduction of Capital Transit Co. rates.

The Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council and the Washington Industrial Union Council filed a joint motion asking the PUC for "an order on or before February 1 reducing the company's rates by reducing the weekly charge for a pass to the amount of $1 and charge for tokens from 3 for 25 cents to 4 for 30 cents."

Decision Expected Soon

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Interstate Commerce Commission said that a decision may be expected "in the near future" in the Army-Navy request for bus fare reductions to nearby Government buildings.

The petition to the PUC was indorsed by accompanying letters from the American Federation of Government Employes, AFL; Columbia Typographical Union 101, United Federal Workers of America, CIO; National Lawyers Guild, United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, and Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO.

Agencies Asked to Aid

"To assure speedy and just action," it was said, the Office of Price Administration and the Office of Economic Stabilization were asked to "intervene."

The motion took issue with the position of the PUC that any rate reduction must be preceded by an "investigation . . . of the present value of the company property" and stated:

"The obligations imposed upon both the Commission and the company require an immediate reduction . . . by not less than two million dollars per year."

Signed by Sidney R. Katz and Joseph D. Phillips, the motion asked for "an immediate public hearing to require the company to show cause why its rates should not be reduced. It also included a demand that Capital Transit be required to accept transfers from suburban bus companies operating into Washington.

Workers, After British Tour, Explain War Production

By Kurt Kelman

Four American workers, who recently returned from an OWI-sponsored tour of British plants, yesterday were received at a luncheon of the International Labor Office at the Mayflower Hotel.

Coming back with four British workers, who will tour American plants, they summed up their observations at a press conference before going to the British Embassy for an official reception. They spent Sunday afternoon at the White House with Mrs. Roosevelt.

Stanley Ceizyk, of the American delegation, asserted that the "admirable record of British workers in the war effort" resulted from political representation in the govment.

Labor's Wishes Detailed

Opinion among the American and British delegations centered around the following expressions:

"1. Labor's confidence and full participation in the war cannot be assured unless it is given a greater voice in the Government and a stake in the peace.

"2. Equitable taxation, as practiced in England, would reassure workers that "the war doesn't produce millionaires.'

"3. American soldiers overseas resent labor mostly because they are 'misinformed.' Official publications tell them about strikes but they fail to explain labor's issues at stake.

"I do not condone strikes," Ceizyk, a Lockheed worker and member of the International Association of Machinists, AFL, declared, "but some of the labor disturbances are really nothing but an extension of the fight of the people for decency and a better living—the very things we are fighting for.

British Ask "Solidarity"

"If you explain this to the soldiers, as we had occasions to do, they understand the events on the home front much better."

Asked whether they had a "message" to American labor, the four British workers expressed their strong belief in "international solidarity."

"International cooperation of labor organizations of all countries should and could become the nucleus for the cooperation between states," they agreed. "Labor all over the world has only one aim: world peace through social justice."

Draft Unfair, Says Brewster Union Official

It's unfair to draft members of Local 365, UAW-CIO, the union at Brewster Aeronautical Corp., in the opinion of one of the shop stewards.

In a recent edition of Aero Notes, official union organ, a shop steward at the Newark plant, which is soon to be closed, wrote a sharp protest about his union "brothers" being drafted.

His letter as printed by Aero Notes is:

"Dear Editor:

"I would like to protest the run around the Newark brothers are receiving from Selective Service officials. Every time I turn around I find another Newark guy in 1-A. It seems to me highly unfair that the Newark brothers should receive this kind of treatment. Unless something is done immediately, the Newark boys will be in the Army because of a lot of red tape in Selective Service. AL ROSE,

"Stewart Wing Dept."

In a recent report the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee headed by Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, which investigated the Brewster production failures for two months, demanded that Selective Service investigate deferments granting Brewster workers, particularly those given union officials.

In Brewster report the Naval Affairs Committee claimed that the salaries of shop stewards and other union officials, all described as nonproductive employes were costing the United States taxpayers half a million dollars under Navy contracts. The committee demanded that the Navy cost accountants and the Budget Bureau review these salaries with a view to disallowing them.

Dr. Stirling To Head Group In Bond Drive

STIRLING

Dr. W. Calhoun Stirling, of 2618 31st st. nw., has been appointed chairman of the Professional Division of the Fourth War Loan District Committee, it was announced last night by John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee.

Accepting the appointment, Dr. Stirling said:

"The legal, dental and medical sections which comprise the professional division for the Fourth War Loan will be organized to effect a better record than ever before in lending support to our Government's war financing program. Recent meetings I have had with Washington professional men have shown that these men realize that they must both buy and sell all the bonds they possibly can.

29 Hurt as D. C.-Bound Bus Skids on Icy Road, Crashes

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 3 (AP).—Fourteen persons were in Rockingham Memorial Hospital here tonight as the result of injuries received today when a Washington-bound Greyhound bus skidded on a Valley Pike curve at Burketown, midway between Harrisonburg and Staunton, and literally twisted in two.

In addition to those hospitalized, 15 other passengers were treated for minor cuts and bruises. They were not adimitted to the institution. There were 32 passengers on the bus and they were brought to the hospital in a passing school bus, in ambulances and in private automobiles, officers said.

Passengers said the bus apparently skidded on an icy spot on the highway and the rear end swerved around shearing off the culvert guard rail and turning on its side. The front half of the bus went vertically over the side of the culvert and the front wheels came to rest on the creek bed 12 feet below.

A. W. Ferguson, of Roanoke, the driver, was pinned in his seat and suffered a severe back injury.

Ben Powers, Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. Naomi Lawson, Baltimore; Mrs. Vida Morris, Washington; Mrs. Alice Webster, Weaverville, N. C.; John Honeycutt, Elizabethtown, Tenn.; Mrs. James Cortese, Belmont, N. Y.; Mrs. Lucille Muray, Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Points, Bridgeport, Conn.; Robert Morris, Washington; Miss Alice Musick, Lebanon, Va.; Mrs. Ann Hankansen, Winchester, Mass.; Miss Virginia Walters, Winchester, Va.; A. W. Ferguson, Roanoke.
